Man, Sister, Lawyer Held As Coster's Blackmailers

Disbarred Attorney Has Criminal Record; Woman and Brother Once in Drug Trade

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27.—The Government today began a roundup of the shadowy company of men suspected of extorting money from the late F. Donald Coster, the indicted president of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., who had cried out against blackmailers in a note written before his suicide December 16.

The first suspect arrested was Walter H. Cragg, a disbarred lawyer convicted of grand larceny in 1914, who was charged with using the mails to defraud and acting in concert with others for that purpose.

Two others were identified by United States District Attorney Gregory Noonan as Mary Brandino and her brother, Joseph. The Brandinos, Noonan added, were charged with the same offenses as was Cragg. They were said by Federal investigators to have been associated with Coster in a Brooklyn drug business in 1920. Other arrests were ordered.

Suspect Has Record

Cragg's police record shows a conviction for grand larceny in 1914 and a prison sentence of one to three years.

Coster, who shot himself to death in his Connecticut country mansion in the midst of scandalous disclosures concerning an $18,000,000 overstatement of assets in his firm, left a long letter, published posthumously, blaming "Wall street plunder and blackmail" for his difficulties—"as God is my judge."

He did not directly connect this "blackmail" with his past as Philip Musica—or admit he was Musica, but Noonan has said that at least eight persons preyed upon the singular swindler by knowledge of his old life.

"Cautious and Slow"

As Noonan went on with this phase of the investigation, John H. McGloon, a McKesson & Robbins vice president in charge of accounting, acknowledged that Coster's secret and damaging operations within the corporation perhaps could have been brought to light by other officials, but added:

"We were cautious and slow in what we did. We did not know for sure that anything was wrong and we did not want to be left out on a limb."

McGloon testified in the State attorney general's inquiry into the overstatement of assets, which Coster managed by his manipulation of the crude drug department, and he pictured his former chief as others had done—as a domineering executive who answered no embarrassing questions.

"In the light of what you now know how would you say this situa-

Posse Saves Girl Held 3 Days in Mountain Shack

Hagerstown, Md., Dec. 27 (AP).—Detective Capt. William H. Peters said tonight Jane Akowsky, 17, who disappeared Christmas Eve, had been found by a posse in a lonely mountain shack, hysterical, but unharmed.

Capt. Peters, who led the posse, said the devoutly religious daughter of a junkyard checker had been taken to her home and would be questioned later. No arrest has been made in the case, he said, but added: "We know who the man is."

Peters said he received information the girl had been seen in an automobile driven by a farmer living in the mountains 8 miles north of here.

Retired Pastor, 72, Foils Pants Thief; Wed in Extra Pair

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 27 (AP).—A thief who entered a hotel bedroom and stole the fiance's pants failed to halt the marriage today of a retired 72-year-old Methodist minister and the woman who once played the organ in his church.

The Rev. Irving B. Bristol, who held pastorates in Sacramento and Santa Cruz, Calif., and Rochester, Dansville, Mount Morris and West Webster, N. Y., took as his bride Mrs. Edith Alberta Murray, about 60.

Mr. Bristol left his room for a moment this morning and returned to find his trousers gone. Luckily, the wedding ring and his wallet were in his coat pocket, and he had an extra pair of trousers in his suitcase.

Science Creates Belief in God, Parley Told

Special Dispatch to The Post

Richmond, Va., Dec. 27.—An "aura of faith" in a Supreme Being arises inevitably from the scientist's efforts to extend knowledge, Dr. George D. Birkhoff told the American Association for the Advancement of Science tonight.

Speaking as the retiring president of the A. A. A. S., whose annual meeting opened here today, the Harvard University mathematician said that "it is this spontaneous faith which furnishes the most powerful incentive and is the best guide to further progress."

Approximately 3,000 scientists, representing virtually every field, were in the Old Dominion's Capital today for the launching of the session and as many more are expected before its close on Saturday.

Dr. Birkhoff conceded that "the immediate effect of scientific advances is often very disquieting," citing the prolonged opposition to Darwin's theory of evolution as an example. Nevertheless, he said, "this phenomenon of faith arises inevitably in the mind of the scientist whenever he tries to evaluate technical conclusions in his special field."

Psychologists, geologists, physicists, chemists and pathologists from every part of the country contributed to today's opening sessions, which were held in hotels, churches and every other available meeting place. This is the first time the 90-year-old association has ever assembled in Virginia, and Richmond's facilities are taxed to the utmost.

Roosevelt Acts to Better Health of D.C.

Facilities Inadequate, He Feels and Suggests Changes at Parley With Rep. Collins

President Roosevelt is very much concerned about Washington's health, and determined to do something to improve it.

At his press conference yesterday afternoon, the President said health conditions were not as good as they should be in the National Capital, and he cited the tuberculosis death rate.

Mr. Roosevelt said facilities here for medical care were clearly inadequate.

Confers on Health

Busy though he is with foreign affairs and a multiplicity of domestic problems, President Roosevelt held a long conference on the health question yesterday with Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the House District Appropriations sub-committee.

He revealed later that he and Representative Collins discussed the need of training more colored nurses at Freedmen's Hospital, where there is a shortage; the improvement of conditions at the National Training School for Girls, scene of riots last year, and the general health situation. He said that Collins, after talking to various officials, would return to the White House for another conference in about ten days.

Colored Afflicted

Washington at one time had the second highest death rate from tuberculosis in the United States, San Antonio having the highest. In recent years there has been an improvement, but Washington still is among the first five cities.

Representative Collins pointed out yesterday that the prevalence of tuberculosis and other diseases among the colored population, which constitutes about a third of the whole population, was responsible for Washington's oft-denounced health record.

Health authorities confirm this, and blame it on the poor economic lot of colored inhabitants, with the resultant malnutrition, overcrowding and bad health habits. They point out that disease in any population group is a menace to the entire population.

Visited by Mrs. Roosevelt

Recently the Public Works Administration allotted money for a 150-bed wing at Freedmen's Hospital, where colored tubercular patients will be cared for. This will give medical students at Howard University, which trains a majority of America's colored physicians, an opportunity to study tuberculosis at the bedside, an opportunity they have not had in the past.

President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt have taken a deep interest in the construction of this wing at Freedmen's Hospital, and in the National Training School for Girls,

Marriage License Clerk Toils as 37 Here Seek to Wed

It was just the day after the day after Christmas to most of the people in Washington, but to the clerk in the marriage license office, yesterday was a lot of hard work.

A total of 37 applications was listed in the post-Christmas rush, compared with only 25 the first business day after Christmas last year.

One explanation for the high 1938 figure was that couples who are married this week will have a long week-end for the honeymoon.

Zona Gale Dies in Chicago at 65; Novels Depicted Small Towns

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Zona Gale, the novelist, best known for her portrayal of life in small Midwestern towns, died tonight in Passavant Memorial Hospital. She was 65.

ZONA GALE

The Portage, Wis., author, who was the wife of W. L. Breese, a manufacturer, died of pneumonia. She had been placed in an oxygen tent almost a week ago. Yesterday, she began sinking rapidly. Her husband was at her bedside. She was brought here for treatment of another ailment and was transferred to Passavant Hospital when pneumonia developed.

Funeral services will be conducted at Portage Thursday, by Dr. Glenn Frank, national chairman of the Republican Party's program committee, and by Dr. John Van Eman Berger, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

"Miss Lulu Bett," which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1921, was her best-known work.

Her prolific works specialized on small town life. Hence she lived at Portage, with a population of about 6,000. She was the "first citizen" of the town, considered a typical city of the Middle West.

Mrs. Breese also was active in civic and political affairs, and was a friend and campaign supporter of the La Follettes.

Her last work, released this year, was a biography of Frank Miller, of Mission Inn, Riverside, Calif. Her husband said home interests

Brilliant Ball Introduces White House Deb to Society

Quentin Roosevelt, 18-year-old son of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, and his cousin, Sara Alden Derby, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Derby (Mrs. Derby is the former Ethel Roosevelt who made her debut at the White House in 1908) were guests of the First Family at dinner at the White House last night and later for the debut ball of Eleanor Roosevelt, niece of the First Lady. They are shown at the home of their aunt, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who made her debut at the White House in 1902 when her father, Theodore Roosevelt, was President. (See also Page 14.)

Gowned in White Organdy, Mrs. Roosevelt's Niece and Namesake Is Center of Young People Who Dance 'Eleanor Glide' and Virginia Reel

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Stepping out in a cloud of billowing white French organdy, Eleanor Roosevelt, 18-year-old niece of the First Lady, made social history as well as her Capital debut last evening when she was feted at a mammoth ball at the White House.

For the first time in 28 years and the fourth since the turn of a century a presentation party took over the spotlight to carry on a tradition begun in 1902 when Theodore Roosevelt's daughter, Alice, made her bow at the Executive Mansion. Six years later, Miss Ethel Roosevelt made her debut at a White House ball, and in 1910 President and Mrs. William Howard Taft entertained at a huge tea in honor of their daughter, Helen.

Party a Youthful One

The setting for last evening's event was very much the same as it was for the first Roosevelt debut. Crystal chandeliers illuminated the spacious east room as before, and cut flowers and ferns in keeping with the season were used in profusion to decorate the entire lower floor. The President, who attended Princess Alice's debut as a handsome young bachelor, was very much in the picture last evening as he took his seat at the end of the east room to greet the guests and watch the dancing.

Last evening's party was a youthful one, like the other two planned for Roosevelt buds. The hundreds of guests from New York, Boston, Philadelphia and residential and official circles of Washington society were friends of the debutante, friends of the President's sons, and a sizable number of Washington girls who have made bows this season.

Greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt

Guests arriving around 10:30 o'clock were greeted by Mrs. Roosevelt, gowned in a frock of Christmas red chiffon; her brother, Hall Roosevelt, father of the debutante, and the debutante herself.

There was only one incident to mar an otherwise gay party. Miss Roosevelt had planned to wear a frock which was en route from the King of Greece. It did not arrive.

Her full-skirted frock of white organdy with rippling ruffles was distinctly a contrast to the one worn by the first Roosevelt who bowed to society at the White House. The 700 guests attending that party saw the girl who was to win fame as "Princess Alice" in a clinging gown "of white

Two Disasters Kill Scores in Japan

Tokyo, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—Nearly 100 persons were believed to have been killed in two disasters today.

In Toyama prefecture an avalanche which swept down from the mountains buried many houses. Thirty-nine bodies had been recovered tonight and 11 persons were in hospitals, seriously injured.

Near Seoul, Korea, a tunnel collapse, killing 17 persons.

Cold Kills 12; 20-Degree Day Forecast Here

Low Temperatures to Hold Till Tomorrow; Snow in Md. and Va.

A brief cold wave rolled in on the Capital last night as the mercury in Eastern and Middle Western States fell before the onslaught of the icy winds roaring in from the West.

The temperature was expected to hit bottom at 20 degrees before dawn, following a steady decline from a high of 48 at 11:30 a. m. A drop of 21 degrees to 27 had been registered by 10 p. m.

The Weather Bureau predicted that today would be "fair and cold," with fresh and diminishing westerly winds. A northwest wind blew yesterday at 20 miles an hour. Slowly rising temperatures were in view for tomorrow.

Dozen Deaths Reported

Although Washingtonians shivered, they were enjoying mild weather compared to the residents of Warroad, Minn., on the Canadian border, where the thermometer registered a low of 37 degrees below zero. Other icy spots on the Nation's weather map included Devils Lake, N. Dak., 22 below; Duluth, Minn., 14 below, and Minneapolis-St. Paul, 9 below. Subzero readings were recorded from ten States.

Wind, cold and sleet-covered highways accounted for at least a dozen deaths, according to the Associated Press.

Southwest Virginia was blanketed with several inches of snow. In the Tazewell section, a violent windstorm unroofed houses, uprooted trees and did $2,000 damage to a lime warehouse and its contents.

Snow hampered motor traffic in western Maryland. Western Pennsylvania suffered a severe windstorm that tore off a hospital roof at Latrobe, leaving 75 patients in darkness for more than a half hour

Paris Starts Warships to Djibouti

One Vessel on Way, Others to Follow As Italians Hem in Somaliland Base

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 27.—France started reinforcement of her East African colony of Somaliland against Italian pressure for a bigger empire today by rushing a warship to Djibouti.

The 1,969-ton dispatch boat D'Iberville, of the French east Mediterranean fleet, steamed south from Beirut, Syria, to the Somaliland port. Other naval units were expected to follow her into the Red Sea as result of an appeal for reinforcements from the governor of Somaliland. France has no fleet in the Red Sea.

Djibouti, by its railway connection with Addis Ababa, is the principal outside link for Italy's Ethiopian empire.

Italians Seize Oases

Simultaneously, it was learned Italian military caravans have occupied and have been holding for 18 months some oases in the disputed, arid frontier between France's Somaliland and Italy's Ethiopia.

The foreign ministry announced, however, that no official confirmation could be found for press reports of mass concentrations of Fascist troops in Ethiopia facing Somaliland.

An official pointed out the frontier region is a vast expanse of desert where mass movements of troops would be difficult.

But it was acknowledged that small units of Italians had taken "two or three" oases to which France also has laid claim but has not occupied with soldiers.

These occupations, however, were viewed as a far cry from reported preparations for an Italian invasion of Somaliland.

The border was charted by a map of 1879, but some points never have been fixed clearly. A geographical mission has been expected to go to the zone to clear up the matter.

Daladier to Show Might

Nevertheless, the French government continued to tighten its hold on its African empire against Italian aspirations.

Announcement of the program of Premier Daladier's trip to North Africa showed he would be gone from January 2 to January 10. He will stop for only a few hours in Corsica and then proceed to northern and southern Tunisia and Algeria and in effect conduct a counterdemonstration of French military and naval might on the flank of Italy's Libya.

Although apprehension has been expressed over the trip of British Prime Minister Chamberlain to Rome January 11-14 for fear Premier Mussolini may attempt to win him over to his side on African territorial issues, officials said here no plans had been made for Chamberlain to stop off in Paris first.

Nazi Reporters Protest Snub at Lima Party

Lima, Peru, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—A group of German newspapermen representing the official German News Agency Transocean, tonight protested to Berlin that they were not invited to a cocktail party President Oscar Benavides of Peru gave in honor of foreign correspondents covering the Eighth Pan-American conference.

The Nazi newspapermen also urged the German minister here to lodge a formal protest with the Peruvian government for what they regarded as a "direct, intentional affront."

G.O.P. Denied More Rules Seats; Gains 3 Ways and Means Places

Reorganizing their reduced majority for the Seventy-sixth Congress convening next Tuesday, House Democratic leaders have tentatively decided to sanction no Republican increase in the pivotal House Rules Committee, it was learned last night.

Tentative agreement has been reached on a three-member increase in Republican representation on another key committee—Ways and Means.

Both committees were riddled by the election and Republican leaders have demanded increased membership in keeping with their swollen 169-member minority.

Concentrating on organization problems pending formulation of the President's legislative program, party conferences in advance of the new session were slated by leaders on both sides of the Capitol.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley will call a caucus of Senate Democrats Saturday morning. Routine re-election of Barkley as leader is expected. In addition, a majority secretary will be elected and two vacancies filled on the Senate Democratic steering committee.

House Democrats will caucus Monday afternoon on the eve of the new session. Majority officers will be re-elected, but the caucus is expected to postpone selection of Democratic Ways and Means committeemen.

Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee determine Democratic appointments to all other House committees. Contests for the six vacant Democratic posts are expected to be the sharpest in years, with leaders taking a hand for the first time in the selection of new members.

The House Republican conference will follow the Democratic caucus.

Colleges Asked To Train 20,000 Air Pilots a Year

The Gallup Poll

Preparedness Sentiment Rises 20%

Overwhelming Vote Is Recorded for Better American Armament

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Dec. 27.—With European powers arming at a furious rate, with Germany redrawing the map of Europe and with wars already in progress in the Orient and Spain, American sentiment for armed preparedness has increased steadily in the three-year period from 1935 to 1938.

GALLUP

Three years ago this month the American Institute of Public Opinion began measuring the public's attitude toward a larger army, navy and air force, and has carried on its studies at regular intervals since then. The latest survey, just completed, finds that the public is not only overwhelmingly in favor of stronger armed defense but that preparedness sentiment is about 20 per cent greater today than it was in 1935.

The trend of sentiment is evident in answers to the questions: "Should the United States build a larger Navy? Should it enlarge the strength of its Army? Should it enlarge its air force?

	LARGER NAVY? Yes	No
Dec., 1935	72%	28%
Dec., 1938	86	14
	LARGER ARMY?

Dec., 1938	82	18
	LARGER AIR FORCE?
	Yes	No
Dec., 1935	84%	16%
Dec., 1938	90	10

The studies find a particularly sharp increase in sentiment for rearmament since the Munich agreement in September. The increase is undoubtedly related to the fact that, as indicated in previous Institute surveys, a large majority of American voters believe that Munich only heightened the chances of eventual war.

20,000 Fliers Wanted

By Robert C. Albright.

A civil air program in the colleges of the country, ultimately training 20,000 pilots a year as a backlog for national defense, a reservoir for Army and Navy air forces, yesterday was announced by President Roosevelt.

A practical test of the program will be inaugurated immediately at a dozen centers. Between January and July, 300 selected students between the ages of 18 and 25 will receive flight training under a $100,000 National Youth Administration allotment.

President Roosevelt said the test will furnish a training pattern for a broader program to cost $9,800,000 annually and to be applied on a Nation-wide scale at several hundred colleges and universities in the 1939-40 school year.

Army and Navy Instructors

From the cream of an annual crop of 20,000 trained pilots, choice students would be selected for further training in the Army and Navy air corps reserve. The rest would bulwark the Nation's civilian air force and supply a great pool of semitrained men to be drawn on in time of national need.

The President said the program was formulated by the Civil Aeronautics Authority and will be administered as a vocational training project under the National Youth Administration. Army and Navy pilots will serve as instructors. Planes will be rented from private owners.

Mr. Roosevelt said the program has no connection with a separate project being studied for training civilian aviation mechanics, to service expanded Army, Navy and private air fleets. That plan, he said, is a different story, and not ready yet.

CAA Sees Air Crisis

Neither would he verify reports that the Administration will ask Congress to build up the Nation's military strength in the air to a total of 13,000 planes. He said no decision has been reached on extent of the increase.

Some skepticism has been expressed in military quarters over ability to attain a 13,000-plane goal in the immediate future because of the large trained ground force needed to service such an increase and the tremendous demand it would make on the manufacturing industry.

Coincident with the President's announcement, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, pointing to authority given it to foster development of aviation in the interests of national defense, said the program to a large degree will "meet the aeronautical crisis now facing the country."

By careful co-ordination of the program with those of both Army and Navy, a statement by the agency said, "it will be possible in the event of national emergency to expand the regular military flying services from a reservoir of civilian airmen and aircraft surpassing any-

THE CAPITAL BY AIR

From the air you get a clearer idea of the majesty of this Capital: its relics and monuments, forts, Navy Yard, Army and Navy flying fields, the barracks and the War College, the villa of the Chief Executive, the four palaces of the law makers, the white marble cloister of the Supreme Court, its circles and squares and diagonal avenues, the civilian barracks of the Government clerks.

Alice Longworth . . . her house

* * * *

Perhaps to remind the Government of dirigibles, the Goodyear balloon people, who yearn to build some more, keep a small seven-passenger airship flying above the Capital. It is a familiar detail of the Washington skies; I miss it when it goes off on a jaunt. Its lazy gait is ideal for sightseeing. I spent an hour and a half on it yesterday cruising between Mount Vernon and the British Embassy.

* * * *

Seen from above, the Government is a splotch of gray stone buildings against the residential red brick. At year's end the White House lawn and other official patches of grass are still green.

The Capital is ringed with old fortifications, vestiges of thick brick and stone ramparts, old trenches. The modern defenses are 200 miles away, down the Chesapeake.

"—sightseers by air"

From the air, flying up the Potomac (which impales the Capital on its three channels like the prongs of a trident—or a pitchfork, if your background is bucolic) there seem to be four separate groups of Government buildings.

One huddles west and southwest of the White House; one is southeast, north of the Mall, and another further southeast, south of the Mall; and the fourth clusters around the Capitol, a mile to the east. (I'm beginning to think the air tourists get their $3 worth.)

* * * *

Below the dangling ropes of the balloon, ducks are flying southward; and further down, partly hidden in the blinds on the river, are hunters waiting for a shot at them.

To the west, on the Virginia shore, are the trails where Braddock took off against the Indians, where George Washington hunted and fished and surveyed and rode his horse in to Gadsby's Tavern at Alexandria for a little port and relaxation. There he was commissioned.

Three blocks away you can see the house where Lee became the Southern commander.

* * * *

Now Alexandria is surrounded by air fields. (One of them Hugo Eckener chose as a Zeppelin terminal.) Across the river the Army and Navy planes are endlessly taking off and landing.

Through his two-way radiophone the pilot of the "Resolute"—that's the balloon we're floating about in—hears reports on the airliners around the Washington airport.

The Capital's new airport is still mostly water—a bit of the Potomac is being filled in for it—and the house where Nellie Custis was born overlooks it.

"—where GW went hunting"

Nearby Maryland and Virginia seem from the air to be filling up rapidly with the suburban homes of our officialdom; and a little further out and down the river are the estates of the gentry, where New Englanders and Westerners go horsey, Virginian and patrician as rapidly as possible. Some manage it overnight.

* * * *

From above some of the legations and embassies seem enormous. There's the Siamese Legation across the road from the French Embassy; the other evening it seemed so crowded at its reception celebrating a royal anniversary; now it's plainly big enough to house all the Siamese princes . . . A little further south, that yellow gleam is Alice Longworth's house near Sheridan Circle.

* * * *

Now Mount Vernon is below again—so peaceful with its tomb and the tourists gazing up at us from the gravel paths . . . The majesty of the Catholic Church is here, too, with its great holdings from Georgetown to the Franciscan Monastery . . .

Sixteenth street is dominated by Protestant churches . . . St. Elizabeths Hospital for the Insane looks like a village; it shelters more people than most county seat towns . . . The Capital is ringed with golf courses, too . . .

Security Board To Ask Increase For Child Aid

Would Put Grants to States on Same Basis As Those for Pensions

Enactment of legislation to place grants to States for dependable children on a parity with contributions for old-age assistance will be recommended to Congress by the Social Security Board, it was learned yesterday.

In its annual report, which will be submitted at the middle of January, the board will ask authority to match amounts set aside by States for child assistance as is done now in the case of aid to aged and blind persons.

The security act at present makes provisions for Federal grants-in-aid to States of one-third of their total contributions for each dependent child, limited to $18 a month for the first child in a family and $12 for each additional child.

Poor States Need Help

The burden of putting up two-thirds of the total made available for dependent children, however, has been too great for a number of States, the board insists. The effect, it has found, has been to reduce greatly the total amount provided for child assistance as compared with sums made available for assistance to aged.

Board research experts estimate that the additional cost to the Federal Government of legislation authorizing contributions for child aid on a 50-50 basis would be between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 annually.

In addition, the board will recommend that the age limit for dependent children be raised from 16 to 18 in the cases of children attending school.

President Roosevelt will send to Congress, along with the board's annual report, a special message urging enactment of legislation to carry out the board's recommendation.

So far as old age insurance is concerned, the board is expected to reiterate the proposals for increased coverage and benefits advanced by the Social Security Advisory Council in its final report, recently made public. Board officials and experts collaborated with the advisory council, as the council's report is, in large measure, the board's also.

Board recommendations, however, will deal, in addition to this matter, with other phases of the social security program, such as child and old age assistance, and other forms of aid and unemployment insurance.

Variable Grants Weighed

The social security old age program is divided into two parts—old age assistance to States, which is a temporary old age pension plan, and the permanent old age insurance plan.

The board is expected to recommend to Congress that consideration be given to the question of "variable grants" to States for old-age assistance.

The general idea is to increase grants-in-aid to the poorer or "have-not" States, while permitting grants to the wealthier States to remain about where they are.

The plan would have the effect, to some extent, of redistributing national income by the taxing process, giving poorer States more than the richer ones.

Elderly persons in the poorer States would reap the benefit in the form of larger monthly pensions. The cost of old-age assistance to the Federal Government would rise.

Members of Congress from certain Southern States, among them Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, are said to be interested.

The board is anxious to simplify the unemployment insurance plan. It is working on a uniform unemployment insurance law which it intends to ask States to adopt. It is also preparing a combined form for old-age insurance and unemployment insurance taxes which will do away with the necessity of separate reports by employers for these levies.

Child Aid Move Gains

If States could be induced to adopt a uniform unemployment insurance law, the board feels administrative troubles would be greatly curtailed.

The board also is considering plans for a joint Federal-State merit system to administer social security activities.

The proposal that the Federal Government match State funds for aid to dependent children is in line with a movement gaining headway in Administration circles to give more attention to child assistance.

This is reflected in the recommendation of the Social Security Advisory Council, which the board is expected to reiterate, that greater consideration be given the family unit, in old-age benefits, by making provision for allowance to wives, widows and orphans of insured persons.

The Administration, it is said, wishes to promote socially desirable objectives through the medium of social security grants and benefits. One of these is preservation of the family unit. Another is to try to check a surprising decline in the percentage of children in the total population.

The board now is making grants to 42 States to help support more than 625,000 children. Grants total $8,000,000 a month.

first subjects which the new Congress will consider. Judging by the sentiment in the Institute survey, measures for spending money on the Army, Navy and air force are likely to meet with great popular approval.

When asked why they favor increases in the Nation's military and naval strength, the majority of voters give three main reasons.

The first is a feeling that "war seems inevitable" and that therefore "we'd better be prepared to protect our interests."

The second is that the United States must take account of European rearmament, and must not let foreign nations "get so far ahead that we would be put in a defenseless position."

The third reason is the belief that America can "help keep world peace only by being strong."

The minority of voters who, on the other hand, oppose increasing the Nation's armed forces fear that the country would become involved in a war more easily if it were strongly armed, and declare that American defenses are now sufficient and that to spend more money on armament is "a financial waste."

The overwhelming sentiment for preparedness does not indicate, however, that the Nation desires to go to war with any country. In fact the Institute has found that 70 per cent of voters think American participation in the last war was a mistake, and 95 per cent say that if another war like the World War develops in Europe the United States should not take part.

Bethlehem Ordered to Abolish 'Union'

NLRB Examiner Finds Steel Firm Dominated Employe Representation

Bethlehem Steel Corporation was held last night by a Labor Relations Board trial examiner to have violated the Wagner Labor Relations Act in its "domination" of employe representation plans in nine of its factories, and disestablishment of the plans was called for.

Approximately 100,000 employes are expected to be affected by the findings, said the trial examiner, Frank Bloom.

The 20-year-old representation plans, attacked by the C. I. O.'s Steel Workers Organizing Committee as a "company union," were said to have been established by Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem president, as "an integral part of our business."

Plants Listed

Plants of the company covered by the report are at Sparrows Point, Md., Lackawanna and Blasdell, N. Y., and at Johnstown, Bethlehem, Steelton, Lebanon, Rankin and Leedsdale in Pennsylvania.

Bloom ruled that employes were denied their right, under the Wagner act, to choose their own representatives freely.

If the company fails to carry out Bloom's recommendations within ten days, he suggested that the board issue a formal order requiring compliance.

Expressed Preferences

He said:

"The respondents (Bethlehem) expressed in many ways their dislike of outside unions and their preference for the plans which they themselves had originated and installed in the various plants of the company."

He accused Bethlehem of contributing "monetary support to the activities of those who were actively engaged in attempting to break" the 1937 "little steel" strike, including Mayor Daniel Shields of Johnstown, Pa., and the Johnstown Citizens Committee, formed during the strike.

Bloom cleared the company of charges that it had discriminated against three workers after the strike.

He said "the evidence clearly discloses" that the company "did employ the Pinkerton Detective Agency" until April 10, 1937," for the purpose of interfering with the rights guaranteed to their employes by the . . . (labor relation) act."

Ceased in 1937

"The work was described as 'radical activities' on the Pinkerton records," Bloom said, "but it consisted in obtaining information as to the organization activities of labor organizations, with special reference to the C. I. O. and the S. W. O. C. For the year 1936 the Pinkerton Detective Agency received $16,022.66 from the company for such work.

"It further appears that on April 10, 1937, respondents discontinued the services of the Pinkerton's paid professional spies . . . It is apparent from the records that the Pinkerton Detective Agency retired from industrial espionage work because of the bringing to light of its activities by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, commonly known as the La Follette committee."

Charges that the various Bethlehem plants had employed "extra guards for the purpose of intimidating their employes" were dismissed by Bloom.

"To the contrary, it is affirmatively shown that the respondents did not hire guards or take on extra policemen for the purpose of intimidating or coercing their employes," he said.

China Denies Wang Is Seeking Peace With Japan

The Chiang Kai-Shek government has not approached Japan on the subject of negotiating peace, the Chinese embassy declared yesterday, making public an official telegram from Chungking, dated December 27, designed to correct persistent reports in Japanese quarters to the contrary. In fact Japan's recent move to establish an Asia development bureau means, the telegram said, there can be no compromise with Tokyo. The telegram quotes "Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek as saying with regard to Wang Ching-Wei's departure from Chungking that Wang left for Hanoi (Indo-China) for medical treatment.

"There were, however, rumors abroad alleging that Mr. Wang made the trip on behalf of the National Military Council to discuss peace terms with Japan," he added. "There is no shred of justification for such report. Mr. Wang's journey has no slightest connection with the Military Council, nor the Central Kuomintang, nor the National Government."

Roosevelt Calls Parley on Railway Relief

Will Convene Next Week, Wheeler Reveals In White House Visit

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt will confer with Congressional leaders and Administration advisers late this week on a legislative program for relief of the railroads.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, discussed with the President yesterday the recommendations of a six-member labor-management committee appointed by Mr. Roosevelt.

Wheeler said Mr. Roosevelt asked him to return at the end of the week, when Chairman Lea (Democrat), California, of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, and perhaps representatives of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other Government agencies will be present.

No Decisions Yet

"We are going to try to work out a program," Wheeler said, but added that no decisions had been reached.

The President was not expected to include railroad recommendations in his annual message to Congress next week but probably will submit to committees of Congress the report of the railroad advisory group.

Later, some persons said, he may send specific recommendations of his own.

Meanwhile John A. Hastings, a former New York State Senator, came to town yesterday, rented an office and prepared to sell the Nation on his one-plank scheme for solving the railroad problem.

"Postalizing" Is Plan

He calls it the "Hastings plan for postalizing transportation."

"It's the only answer to the railroad problem," he insisted, pounding his right fist into the palm of his left hand.

Hastings, who claims support from all sections of the country, including "very substantial manufacturers" in the Middle West, already has launched a newspaper advertising campaign.

"Within the next 60 days," he said, "we plan to place advertising in 60 newspapers throughout the country. I have no idea how much it will cost, but the money will be available."

40 Miles for 15c

"Postalizing transportation suggests the application, to the passenger and freight service of the American railroads, of the rate principle successfuly and profitably employed for a hundred years in first-class letter carriage," he said.

Under his proposal all suburban fares, within a 40-mile limit, would be 15 cents, or 25 cents for a round trip. He proposes that the country be divided into nine regions, and that five types of passenger service be offered. The coach fare from Chicago to New York would be only $1, and the parlor car charge $3, with fares ranging up to $15 for limited de luxe trains, plus a "nominal" additional charge for extra services.

New York-to-San Francisco fares would start at $5.

Hopes for National Scale

Eventually, Hastings said, he hopes for a national scale of passenger fares and freight charges, instead of the zone system.

He estimated "conservatively" that passenger business under his proposal would increase 200 per cent. Instead of a heavy annual loss, he predicted the railroads could operate passenger services with a yearly profit of $300,000,000 to $500,000,000.

Hastings said he had "spent every dime I ever had" in sponsoring the plan. Funds for financing his campaign will come from well-to-do supporters, he added.

He named Frank R. Fageol, Kent, Ohio, bus and truck manufacturer, as one of the most active advocates of his proposal. He said Fageol was an old friend.

"My plan simply is the application of mass production methods to transportation," he told reporters.

House Wired for Sound But System Will Not Invite Radio Speeches Every Day

By the Associated Press.

Assembling Congressmen found yesterday that the House chamber had been wired for sound.

Workmen put the finishing touches to a public address system described by David Lynn, Capitol architect, as the "most up-to-date in existence."

LYNN

Two previous attempts have been made to so equip the House but were abandoned because, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri explained yesterday, many members got the impression they were to be used to broadcast proceedings of the House to the Nation. Leaders feared most of the 435 House members would want to make a speech every day.

President Rooseveut told his press conference yesterday he would have no Federal appointments to announce before next Monday or Tuesday.

Of reports that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Secretary of War Woodring were leaving the Cabinet possibly for diplomatic assignments, the Chief Executive said that was just another story and he would not attempt to put the adjective on it.

Asked where he had Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan in mind for an important New Deal post, the President smiled and said he had 57 varieties in mind.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, will ask that Congress demand more complete information on Government corporations which he said now have no direct responsibility to the legislative body.

Asserting he had found it virtually impossible to obtain an accurate check of such lending organizations as the RFC, the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration, Byrd said yesterday he would insist on full information about their activities.

He termed these groups "the invisible part of our Government," adding that they had independent power to create Federal indebtedness of $16,000,000,000 and already had used half of that authorization.

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday appointment of Representative Beiter, Buffalo, N. Y., as special assistant to Howard A. Gray, assistant PWA administrator.

Beiter, a Democrat, was defeated for re-election in November. He was a leader of the public works bloc in Congress and introduced several public works bills.

U. S. Cities Vote Down 65 Per Cent Of Bond Issues

Voters of the Nation's cities turned against 65 per cent of the new borrowing proposed in bond issue questions submitted to them in recent elections, it was revealed yesterday by William L. Austin, director of the Census Bureau, Department of Commerce.

The study was based on replies from 138 cities of more than 50,000 population, of which 60 reported a total of 222 local measures were submitted to the voters. Of these, 129 were defeated and 93 approved. Issuance of bonds was proposed in 131 measures, while charter amendments were objectives of 59.

Bond-issue plans submitted in 38 of the cities involved borrowing of $97,402,315, of which proposals for $63,703,000 were defeated and those involving $33,699,315 approved.

Among the purposes for which the bond issues were proposed, with the number approved and defeated, were:

Buildings and equipment: Schools, 11 approved and 7 defeated; administration, 5 and 5; police and fire, 2 and 8; assembly halls, etc., 3 and 5; libraries and art galleries, 2 and 6; hospitals and sanitariums, 2 and 5; other, 6 and 5.

Public service enterprises: Airports, 5 and 4; water systems, 3 and 2; street railways and buses, 0 and 2.

Franking Puts Mails 'in Red,' Farley Reports

Estimates It Costs U. S. $48,224,377 a Year; Deficit $43,811,556

By the Associated Press.

Postmaster General Farley reported to President Roosevelt yesterday that the Postoffice spent $43,811,556 more than its income in the 1938 fiscal year, but said it would have made $4,412,821 profit if it had not had the expense of its free services.

He estimated that it cost $48,224,377 to carry mail free for Congressmen, Government departments and blind persons, to subsidize air mail and perform "nonpostal" functions.

Receipts for the year ended last June 30 totaled $728,634,051, and expenditures amounted to $772,445,607. This compared with expenditures of $772,815,842 and revenues of $726,201,109 in the previous fiscal year, when the gross deficit was $46,614,732.

Air Mail Has Busiest Year

When reporting on the 1937 fiscal year, Farley estimated that free services cost $59,258,471, and said the net surplus, if these costs were left out of account, was $12,643,739.

These were highlights of his report on 1938:

Mail planes had the busiest year in air service history. Pilots carrying mail flew 46,112,904 miles, or 15 per cent more than in any previous year.

Postage was the principal source of income, accounting for $647,821,776, or $4,260,683 more than in fiscal 1937.

Better roads and faster vehicles enabled officials to consolidate 520 rural mail routes and establish 63 new ones, providing mail service to 17,985 more families in rural areas.

The department's maintenance branch took over 276 new Federal buildings and 33 extensions in addition to 18 buildings which replaced antiquated structures.

Pays Tribute to Employes

Postal inspectors made these investigations:

Theft and rifling of mail, 1,376; fraudulent use of the mails, 996; postoffice burglaries, 4,866; money-order forgeries, 293, and embezzlement, 227. Only 16 employes were found to have been involved in these offenses.

Farley paid special triubute to department employes for their assistance in taking the national unemployment census in November, 1937, which involved distribution of card to approximately 34,000,000 homes.

Borah and King Drive for Curbs On Trade Treaties

By the Associated Press.

A bipartisan movement against conclusion of any new reciprocal trade agreements without Senate ratification appeared to be getting under way on Capitol Hill last night.

From several sources—Democratic and Republican alike—came sharp criticism of the act which gives the President authority to lower tariffs in return for concessions from other countries.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, advocated outright repeal of the act as the most direct and "orderly" means of restoring to the Senate the ratification powers it voted away in 1934.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, also said he would like to see the Senate regain its right to approve, or disapprove, treaties, adding that he did not favor tampering with treaties already negotiated.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, expressed dissatisfaction with the way the pacts were working out. He said mining interests in his State had been hurt by the recently concluded treaty with the United Kingdom.

Girl Spurned His Gift, So He Shot Her 10 Times

By the Associated Press.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 27.—Florence Gottwald, 26-year-old radio factory worker, was in critical condition tonight—wounded by 10 bullets which police said were fired by a suitor 20 years her senior because she spurned his Christmas gift.

Detective Harry Kyler said Emil Mascher, 46, a WPA worker, held by police, had sobbed a story of shooting the girl because she did not return his love.

The girl, still conscious, identified Mascher in an operating room, detectives said.

Mascher asked to kiss her. She turned her head and said faintly:

"Take him away."

"I loved her," Kyler said Mascher sobbed, "for three years I tried to get her to marry me, but she wouldn't have anything to do with me."

Man Bit Off Her Ear and Lost It, She Tells Judge

Not only did Isaac Simpson, 39, colored, bite off her ear in a Christmas Day argument, but he put it where it couldn't be found again, Mrs. Alice Fletcher, colored, of 362 Dixon court southwest, testified in police court yesterday. She said she screamed and was rescued by friends, but the ear could not be found. "We looked everywhere for it," the victim said, "because I heard you can have it fixed on again."

Simpson pleaded guilty to a charge of mayhem, and was held for the grand jury on $1,500 bail.

Brenda's Coming-Out Gown

Nation's No. 1 'Glamour Girl' Makes Bow at $50,000 Party

'Golly, My Feet Hurt,' Says Brenda Frazier At Fete Starring 3 Champagne Bars With Milk and Pop for Hangovers

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 27. Dark-eyed Brenda Diana Duff Frazier, widely publicized as America's No. 1 debutante "glamour girl" of 1938, made her formal bow to society tonight in a neo-Byzantine setting of gold and moonlight at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Before an assemblage of 1,200 guests, with two orchestras playing continuously from 10:30 p. m. to dawn, the slender, 17-year-old Brenda was the central figure against a background of mirrors, white ostrich-feather Christmas trees, and exotic red and white flowers washed by roving spotlights.

Unofficial estimates of the cost of the "coming out" party, the major year-end event of the season, ranged as high as $50,000.

As a spectacle, the tripled "400" beaux and belles said it topped anything in recent years, but fell considerably short of Barbara Hutton's four-orchestra debut in 1930 with its $50,000 bill for decorations alone—eucalyptus bough and poinsettias brought from California—or the even more spectacular 1929 debut of Natalie Coe, who had the Ritz-Carlton ballroom transformed into a Southern plantation, complete with mimosa, cottonfield and plunking banjoes.

The reputed all-time "tops" for debut parties, from a financial standpoint, was the $250,000 coming-out of Marjorie Gould in 1929.

In the 1929-30 season, the most dazzling of the late prohibition era, deb parties averaged $12,000 each compared with $8,000 this year.

As an innovation, Brenda had an "anti-hangover" bar as well as three champagne and Scotch bars, stocked on a scale of two bottles of champagne for every three persons—with heavy reserves. At the "A-H" bar, over-exhilarated guests were served a half-pint of milk and half-bottle of soda pop and were assured that by downing the fuzzy mixture the dilemma of the morning after would be minimized.

Court records disclosed recently that Miss Frazier's fortune is estimated at $4,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Her favorite diet is shrimps (at 10 calories per shrimp), and her hobbies run from fast motor cars, the rhumba, night clubs, horseback riding and skiing to piloting a plane. She is 5 feet 6, weighs 116 pounds and wears her jet hair in shoulder-length curls.

Asked how it felt to be the top "glamour girl," whirled through parties day after day, night after night, the roguish-lipped Brenda said with a grimace:

"I love it. But, golly, my feet hurt!"

Fairfax Jails 2 After Holdup And Kidnaping

Vienna, Va., Druggist, Stabbed, Shoots Man In Leg in Scuffle

After the kidnaping of a Washington cab driver and the robbery and stabbing of an elderly druggist at Vienna, Va., two men were held in Fairfax County Jail last night while District police investigated their possible connection in a series of recent taxi holdups.

The prisoners—E. R. Kennon, 31, of Pender, Va., and Roland Carrick, 31, of the 1100 block of M street northwest—were questioned yesterday by Lieut. John Fowler, of the Washington Police Department. Fowler said the men answered decriptions of two gunmen wanted for robbing several taxi drivers here.

Kennon and Carrick were arrested after Dr. Robert Lee Bradfield, 70-year-old Vienna pharmacist, was slashed on his face, hands and neck in a hand-to-hand scuffle. Dr. Bradfield, police said, succeeded in grabbing his gun and wounding Carrick in the left leg.

The bandits went to Dr. Bradfield's store in the taxi of Carrol A. Neitzey, of 87 New York avenue northwest. They hailed Neitzey's cab Monday night and asked to be driven to Vienna. As they crossed Key Bridge, one of the passengers drew a knife and held it against the cab driver's neck, police were told. Neitzey said he was warned:

"If you want to see your wife and children again, keep driving."

Stopping in front of Dr. Bradfield's store, the men took the keys to Neitzey's cab and ordered him to wait until they returned. Instead, the driver ran to a restaurant and called Fairfax police.

Meanwhile, Kennon and Carrick entered the drug store and asked Dr. Bradfield for some beer. Informed beer was not sold there, they ordered some soft drinks. One of the men then walked behind the soda fountain and told Dr. Bradfield:

"This is a stickup. You've got money. Give it to us."

They rifled Dr. Bradfield's pockets and cleaned out the cash register, collecting approximately $31. As they turned to leave, Dr. Bradfield grabbed a gun from behind his counter. Carrick saw the weapon, according to police, and struck the pharmacist in the mouth. As he fell, police said, Carrick jumped on him and the gun was fired. The bullet ripped into Carrick's leg. During the battle Dr. Bradfield was stabbed several times.

Deputy Sheriff Henry Magarity meanwhile stopped outside the drug store and heard a police radio call for another county police car. As the two robbers ran from the store, Magarity and several men from the restaurant captured Carrick. Kennon was arrested several minutes later when he sought information on how to reach Washington at a house some distance down the road.

Parents Claim Tax Exemption For Unborn Child

By the Associated Press.

A father and mother asked the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday for an income tax exemption for an unborn child.

Lloyd E. Wilson and Elsie M. Wilson, San Francisco, answering the Internal Revenue Bureau's contention that they owed $6.18 income tax for 1936, said their daughter, Helen Wilson, was born August 11, 1936.

"The respondent (the bureau) erred by failing to allow an exemption for the dependent daughter, Helen Wilson, for the period January 1, 1936, to date of birth, August 11, 1936, when this daughter was a dependent and a legal person," the petition said.

Many Creeds To Join Today At Simon Rites

Dignitaries and Humble Will Pay Homage To Washington Rabbi

Religious, civic, and educational leaders of the Nation and Washington will join with the humble of many faiths today in a farewell tribute to Rabbi Abram Simon, who died suddenly Saturday following a Christmas goodwill broadcast.

Hundreds of persons from all walks of life yesterday filed by the bier in the temple of Washington Hebrew Congregation, at Eighth and H streets northwest. Banked by flowers, the bier reposed in a small chapel under two scrolls of the Torah, the laws of Moses.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Dr. Simon's associate, will officiate at services to be held at 1 p. m. today in the Temple. Canon Anson Phelps Stokes of Washington Cathedral will read the ritual. Words of farewell will be delivered by Bishop James E. Freeman of the Cathedral and the Rev. Dr. Julian Morgenstern, president of the Hebrew Union College of Cincinnati.

Dr. McCartney to Assist

Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney, of Covenant First Presbyterian Church and chairman of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, will participate in rites to be conducted later at the Hebrew Congregation Cemetery, 1425 Alabama avenue southeast. The Rev. Dr. William Rosenau, of Baltimore, will represent the Central Conference of American Rabbis.

The honorary pallbearers will include Dr. Frank Ballou, Henry P Blair, Representative Sol Bloom, Morris Cafritz, William J. Flather, jr., Robert V. Fleming, Isaac Gans, Marc Goldnamer, Joseph Himes, D J. Kaufman, Dr. Harry Kaufman, Harry King, Simon Lyon, Eugene Meyer, Alvin Newmyer, Daniel C Roper, Maurice D. Rosenberg, Leo Rover, Morris Simon, Leon Tobriner, Joseph P. Tumulty.

Active pallbearers will be Alan David, Norman Fischer, Milton Harris, Maj. Jessie I. Miller, Dr. George Nordlinger, Frederick Pelzman, Theodore D. Peyser, and James Simon.

Officers Listed

Officers of the Temple who will participate in the funeral ritual include Col. Julius I. Peyser, president; Dr. Bernard A. Baer, vice president; Dr. Harry Bernton, David Bornet, William Bush, Allen V. deFord, Jacob Gichner, Mrs. Estelle Greenbaum, Sidney Hechinger, Milton King, Dr. Harry Lewis, Sidney Lust, Samuel T. Schwartz, David Wise, members of the board; Leo Baum, Mark Lansburgh, Herbert Rich, trustees.

Levi H. David, Adolph M. Fischel, Jacob Gichner, Charles Goldsmith and Jacob Solomon are among the past presidents of the congregation who will attend.

The sisterhood of the congregation will be represented by the following officers: Mrs. Frederick Pelzman, Mrs. Jesse Miller, Mrs. Sidney Hechinger, Mrs. Benjamin Brill, Mrs. Max Goodman, Mrs. Albert Ney, Mrs. Martin Baum, Mrs. Theodore D. Peyser, Mrs. A. E. Lichtman, Mrs. David Bornet and Mrs. Simon Eichberg.

The brotherhood's delegation will include Stanford Abel, Herman Norwood, Coleman Stein and Ferdinand Nauheim. Norman Wollberg, Allen Brylawski, Geralding Grosner and Eugene Young will represent the Young Peoples League. All Washington rabbis and many members of the Catholic and Protestant clergy will also attend.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Hooff, Civil War Witness

Final rites will be held today for Mrs. Mary O. Hooff, 50-year resident in the District, who died Monday at her home, 6007 Broad Branch road northwest. She was 93.

Services will be held at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest at 10 a. m., with the Rev. G. E. Lenski officiating. Burial will follow at Glenwood Cemetery.

Born on a Virginia plantation, she witnessed several skirmishes in the Civil War. The estate of her father, William Carson Overall, was situated between Luray and Front Royal. In 1886 she became the bride of Philip Henry Hooff, Alexandria commission merchant, and two years later they came to Washington to make their home. Mr. Hooff died in 1913.

Mrs. Hooff before retirement had been an active worker in the Daughters of American Revolution. She was a member of St. Stephen's and Incarnation Church. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Ella M. Franklin and Mrs. Virginia Bond, both of Washington, and four sons, Henry, Mahlon, Hammond and William, all of Virginia.

Dr. Calvin Bridges, Noted Scientist, Dies

Los Angeles, Dec. 27 (AP).—Dr. Calvin B. Bridges, 48, who became world famous by studying flies to determine the secrets of heredity which give individual characteristics to humans, died here today.

He was an associate of Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, world famous biologist of the California Institute of Technology. Earlier he had served on the staff of Carnegie Institution 19 years.

America's gangster problem. Prof. Adelbert Ford, of Lehigh University, reported progress in his work to produce a new design for auto license plates which would be easier to read.

Another general session will be held tomorrow morning, followed by separate meetings of the various scientific sections.

Study License Plates

Using the college students as subjects, two Lehigh University scholars have completed a series of tests leading them to the conclusion that an auto license plate with one letter and four numerals gives the highest recognition efficiency.

Prof. Adelbert Ford and George F. Derr reported their findings with the recommendation:

"From a practical standpoint, there is every reason why a State should reduce the size of license numbers by mixing letters with numerals, securing the increased memory and attention value for small numbers."

Their investigations, they said, indicate the following:

1. The plate with one letter and four numerals gave the highest recognition efficiency. The score was 5.32 on a scale where "0" represents pure chance and "10" represents perfect recognition.

2. Any plate with mixed letters and numbers gave a higher recognition value than a plate with pure letters or pure numerals.

3. The combination of all letters was the worst, with a recognition score of 2.26.

4. There is a rather definite trend showing that numerals are easier to recognize than letters.

'Lost Continent'

Because there is a "lost continent of Appalachia" buried many miles below the feet of Washingtonians, Philadelphians and New Yorkers, they weigh slightly more than would be the case if they were in, say, Indianapolis or Memphis.

The gravitational difference is too minute for any scales to detect, but it can be indicated by gravity pendulums, use of which were described by Prof. George P. Woolard, of Princeton University.

Half a billion years ago Appalachia towered high above the earth's surface. Then, according to seismological calculations, it sank and was broken.

Then, comparatively recently—about 60 million years back—mud and sediment began to form over the depression. Today the "mud pack" is many miles deep.

At some points in midocean the rocks of Appalachia are buried a mile or so beneath the water's surface. Maurice H. Ewing, of Lehigh University, and Wilbur A. Nelson, of the University of Virginia, described profiles of the continent under New Jersey and Virginia.

Way to Measure Rays

A cheap method for measuring the amount of ultraviolet rays in sunlight was reported by Drs. H. Landsberg and W. Wewl, of Pennsylvania State College.

It is known that some types of glass are discolored by sunlight, a phenomenon sometimes utilized in the production of fancy color effects in glassware. This is a photochemical reaction which is proportional to the incident radiation, hence it can be used to measure the radiation.

By adding small quantities of cerium and vanadium to a special glass, the researchers increased its sensitivity as a gauge. The process makes possible ultraviolet measurements which otherwise can only be accomplished with complicated photoelectric or thermopike equipment.

Question of Cells

Which is more important, the cellular units of an organism or the organism as a whole?

This question, which is as annoying in its way as the one about the chicken and the egg, was tackled at the A. A. A. S. meeting by Prof. Paul Weiss, of the University of Chicago.

According to one view, he said, the cells form the organism; according to another, the organism forms the cells.

"Development is characterized," he said, "by the quality of (a) organizing actions exerted by the cell collective as a whole, and (b) the reactions to these by the constituent cells as individuals."

Accordingly, he compromised, neither theory should be overemphasized at the expense of the other.

"It is the harmonious interplay between the whole and the parts that creates a viable organism."

Wasp Balds Mountains

The wasp was identified as the cause of mountain baldness.

Dr. William A. Gates, of Louisiana State University, addressing the American Association for the Advancement of Science, told how his sleuthing in the mountains of North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia resulted in the disclosure that twig gall wasps were responsible for the "bald spots" on many peaks in the region.

There are 115 such "balds," where trees are conspicuous by their absence. Altitudes range from 2,700 to 6,000 feet.

Exploring Wine Sap Bald and Wayah Bald, Dr. Gates found that their "hair cut" was not yet completed. Wasps were killing thousands of trees before his eyes, oaks being their favorite dish. Other mountain tops nearby which wore conventional "top dressing" were found to be waspless.

Rites Tomorrow For Walter Smith, Railroad Man

Services will be held tomorrow for Walter Scott Smith, retired railroad engineer, who died Monday at his home, 123 Carroll street southeast. He was 58.

The Rev. W. R. Moody, of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, will officiate at the rites tomorrow at 3 p. m. at the W. W. Chambers funeral chapel, 517 Eleventh street southeast. Burial will be in National Memorial Park Cemetery.

An engineer for the Pennsylvania Railroad, Mr. Smith was the son of Robert Smith, engineer for the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac. He lived all his life in the Carroll street home.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lillie Smith; two daughters, Mrs. Rosalie F. Smith, of Washington, and Mrs. Agnes M. Frazier, of Silver Spring, Md.; two brothers, John N. and Fred E. Smith, of Washington, and three sisters, Mrs. William Williams, Mrs. Bessie Rossiter and Mrs. Margaret McCormick, all of Washington.

Alvin Hovey-King Dies Suddenly

New Orleans, Dec. 27 (AP).—Lieut.-Comdr. Alvin Hovey-King, United States Navy, retired, died suddenly at his French Quarter home today. He was 56.

He came here 15 years ago after retiring from service as commercial attache of the United States Embassy in Mexico City. He was a partner in a perfume shop here.

Survivors include his widow; a daughter, Miss Rita Hovey-King, and a brother, Albert Hovey-King, of Washington.

He was born in Chicago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Hovey.

Rites to Be Held For Mrs. Mary Hadley

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hadley, 58, who died Monday at the Washington Sanitarium, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the William Reuben Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda, Md.

Mrs. Hadley was the wife of George L. Hadley, of Chevy Chase, Md., local manager and Eastern representative of W. W. Kimball Co. She was active in Y. W. C. A. affairs and secretary of the Chevy Chase division of the W. C. T. U. Burial will be in Springfield, Mass.

Capital Worker And Mother Die In Indiana Crash

La Porte, Ind., Dec. 27 (AP).—Albert Scheer, jr., 21, of Washington, D. C., a Government employe, died here today, victim of a head-on collision on ice-covered United States Highway 6 near here, that last night claimed the life of his mother, Mrs. Albert Scheer, sr., 51, of Logansport.

They were en route to Logansport from Chicago, where they attended a relative's funeral. Scheer's automobile collided with a vehicle driven by Maurice Wolfers, 45, of Chicago, who was injured slightly. Mrs. Scheer is survived by her husband and a daughter. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

A 10-inch snowfall in Cumberland was accompanied by freezing weather throughout Western Maryland.

Reaching a velocity of 61 miles per hour, a gale swept from the Great Lakes across the City of Buffalo, where ropes had to be strung along the business streets to help pedestrians keep their balance. One 72-year-old man died of a heart attack while struggling against the wind, while another Buffalo resident died of exertion as he chased his hat.

Just across the Niagara River, at Fort Erie, Ontario, a human lifeline of 30 men rescued two men whose boat had sprung a leak.

Raging winds churned Lake Michigan into the strongest sea along its eastern shore in years, according to Coast Guard reports. Several Michigan towns were wholly or almost cut off, including Marquette and Manistique. In the Upper Peninsula the snowfall measured as much as 19 inches.

The mercury plummeted 32 degrees in 18 hours in Chicago, but was expected to drop even further to a minimum of 2 below zero in the city and 6 below in the suburbs. New York, on the other hand, basked in 52-degree weather, although a 27-degree drop was expected by morning.

Toledo's water supply was threatened as a steady wind blew water away from the Maumee River intake pipes and into Lake Erie.

It was predicted that the cold area would penetrate the Southeast overnight and extend to northern Florida. Virginia, the Carolinas, central Georgia and Tennessee were expected to be hit by temperatures of 20 or under.

Maj. Jemison's Rites At Fort Myer Today

Funeral services for Maj. John K. Jemison, Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, retired, who died Sunday in Mount Carmel, Pa., will be held at 2 p. m. today in Fort Myer Chapel with Chaplain Herbert A. Rinard officiating. Burial will be in section 4 of Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Lafayette, Ala., Maj. Jemison was graduated from the coast artillery school, Fort Monroe, Va., in 1915 and retired from the Army six years later. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Josie B. Jemison, of Williamsport, Pa.

Mother, Child Die Together in Fumes Of Burning Sofa

Lorain, Ohio, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—A 9-year-old girl and her mother died together today, clasped in each other's arms.

Coroner S. C. Ward said Mrs. George Cooley, 36, and her daughter, Kay, were asphyxiated by fumes from a smouldering fire in upholstering of a sofa a few moments after Kay telephoned her father at his undertaking establishment that "Mama is sick."

Cooley rushed home and found the bodies. He theorized that Kay had telephoned him when she saw her mother was sick and then gone to her aid. Mrs. Cooley apparently was too ill to move and clutched her daughter so tightly that she, too, died from the fumes.

New Link Made In 'Little TVA' For Nebraska

Power Commission Approves Purchase Of Utility Company

By the United Press.

The Federal Power Commission yesterday authorized the purchase of the Iowa-Nebraska Light & Power Co. by two public power districts in a deal forging all but one vital link in the creation of a "Little TVA" in Nebraska.

The purchase, at a price of $20,195,991, was authorized over the protests of several Nebraska communities which contended that the cost was too great and opposed payment of $504,899 to Guy C. Myers, New York financier who arranged the sale.

Serves 108 Cities

Under the agreement, the Central Nebraska Tri-County Public Power and its irrigation district at Hastings, will pay $17,370,112 for the greatest share of the Iowa-Nebraska properties, while the Lupe River power district at Columbus will pay $2,285,879 for the rest.

Iowa-Nebraska is the second largest power company in the State and serves 108 cities and towns with a total of more than 43,000 customers. Nebraska Power Co., with headquarters in Omaha, is the largest utility and thus far no arrangements have been made for its purchase.

In overriding the price protest, the commission noted that last June 30 FPC experts estimated the original cost of Iowa-Nebraska properties at $16,395,446, compared with the power company's estimate of $20,279,174.

$26,500,000 in Bonds

The commission said that "nothing in this order shall be construed as an acquiescence by this commission in any valuation of property claimed or asserted by the applicant (Iowa-Nebraska) or the purchaser."

The two districts plan to issue $26,500,000 worth of bonds to buy the utility and for other purposes, but the commission declared that its order of approval did "not involve exercise of the jurisdiction of this commission with respect to the financing or issuance of the securities . . ."

The order pointed out that the proposed sale will avoid the duplication of electric facilities and destructive competition in the territory in Nebraska now served by" the private power company.

The commission acted with almost unprecedented speed. Hearings on the proposed sale were closed late Friday, and yesterday was the commission's first business day since then.

2 Arlingtonians Seek $100,000 Crash Damages

A suit for $100,000 damages was filed in District Court yesterday by two Arlington County residents for injuries allegedly received in an auto accident on the Lee highway September 14.

Virginia Hopkins, 18-year-old daughter of Grant G. Hopkins, general agent of the Illinois Bankers Life Assurance Co., and John W. Bragg, of 1031 North Taylor street, Arlington, charged they were seriously hurt when the car in which they were riding was hit by a produce truck driven by William M. Butler, of Staunton, Va.

Butler and the owner of the truck, Mose Walter, of Walter's Fruit & Produce Co., Staunton, were named defendants.

Asking $75,000 damages, Bragg claimed he suffered paralysis as a result of the accident and was permanently injured. Miss Hopkins, who lives at 2330 North Nottingham street, Arlington, demanded $25,000, charging she had "become permanently crippled and disfigured" from scars and loss of teeth resultnig from the collision. Dorsey K. Offutt is attorney for the plaintiffs.

tion in the crude drug department could have been disclosed?" Assistant Attorney Ambrose McCall asked.

Only Brothers Knew

"If the accounts receivable had been circularized it would have been disclosed," McGloon said. "Also, if somebody had gone to Montreal and found an $8-a-week girl in charge of Manning & Co."

(Manning & Co. and W. W. Smith & Co. have been termed by investigators as fictitious corporations through which Coster managed his ballooning of assets.)

McGloon said no one else in the Connecticut branch of the firm—save Coster's brothers, all now under indictment—knew anything about the crude drug department and answered affirmatively McCall's question:

"You had to have that combination, then, in order to cover this thing up in the crude drug department?"

Clew in Scotland

London, Dec. 27.—A possible clew to the financial practices of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., was unearthed in Scotland today, when eight firms engaged in miscellaneous business were notified that they owed the New York drug company a total of approximately $115,000 for goods which they claimed they never ordered or received.

Without exception, officials of the firms involved denied liability, and repudiated the debts, stating that they regarded the entries in the drug company's ledgers as fictitious. It was suggested that the "debts" of the Scottish firms might have been listed at random to represent some of the now vanished "assets" of McKesson & Robbins.

Roosevelt and Collins Confer On Improving D. C. Health

Health

situated on Conduit road on the outskirts of the city.

In the early summer of 1936, Mrs. Roosevelt visited the National Training School and afterward described the institution as "medieval" and "barbarous." Later she invited the inmates to the White House to drink tea, eat ice cream and cake and roam around the mansion and grounds.

A year or so later, the training school was the scene of rioting among the inmates, and this was followed by the dismissal of Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, the superintendent. The post has never been filled. In the interim, Dr. James Lewald, head of the District Training School for Feeble-Minded at Laurel, has been directing affairs at the school.

Favors Continuation

In the last Congress, Representative Collins attempted to have the training school closed and move its dominant colored population to the Home for Colored Children at Blue Plains, but the attempt failed.

President Roosevelt, it is understood, favors continuance of the school with a program under which the girls would be kept busy and taught to earn a living after they get out.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, was "delighted" last night when told about President Roosevelt's expressed interest in local health conditions.

One Center Authorized

"With the support of the President and Congress," he said, "there is no doubt that we can improve health conditions and make the National Capital what it should be."

Dr. Ruhland is working for the establishment here of three or four health centers, where the indigent sick could get early diagnosis and treatment. These would be located in areas where disease rates are highest. Congress already has authorized one such center in the Southwest section.

The Health Department yesterday issued figures on the District's health at about the same time the President was talking to reporters at the White House.

A decrease of 711 deaths from all causes for the first 11 months of the year, as against figures for the same period in 1937, was noted by the Health Department.

For the 11 months this year there were 7,323 deaths, as compared with 8,034 for the same period last year. The number of deaths per 1,000 population in 1937 was 14, and for this year 12.7.

Drop in Pneumonia

The greatest reduction was noted in pneumonia deaths, with a drop of 209. Deaths caused by this disease for the first 11 months this year totaled 495, a scompared with 704 last year.

Infant mortality was reduced from a total of 688 in 1937 to 569 this year for a decrease of 119 deaths.

Cancer was responsible for the largest number of deaths this year, as was the case last year. However, a decrease in cancer deaths was reported this year. A total of 816 persons died from cancer for the 11-month period last year, as compared with 793 this year, a drop of 23.

Tuberculosis was the second high cause of death for the periods both this year and last. Here, too, a reduction was noted. For the first 11 months last year, 544 deaths were attributed to this disease, as compared with 531 this year.

Decreases were also recorded for meningitis deaths, 29 last year and 9 this year; whooping cough, 16 last year and 4 in 1938; diphtheria, 14 last year, 4 this year; measles, 13 in 1937 and 2 this year; typhoid fever, 11 last year, 5 this year, and scarlet fever, 4 deaths last year as compared with 3 this year.

Indian Curios In Commerce Building Store

New Interior Room More Imposing, But Not Nearly as Old

A lot of the handiwork that Poor Lo, the Indian, beats out in his wild habitation, winds up in a snug corner in the Department of Commerce lobby here.

The corner is a store for the sale of Indian wares, and the store, which can't advertise or make itself known too much, has no name. The Indian room, the store in the corner and the Commerce place where they sell Indian goods, are all names for it.

Commerce Store Older

It missed all the attention that attended the recent opening of the Indian arts and crafts room in the new Interior Department Building. There the Indian store is in a beautiful room, especially decorated, and the room was so beautiful it got lots of attention.

The Commerce store in the corner wasn't mentioned, and it's much the older of the two. It has been there four years, under direction of Mrs. L. H. Richardson and is run by the Welfare and Recreational Association, which operates some of the cafeterias, the store in Interior, and, soon, a camp for Federal employes in the Catoctin Mountains.

Foreigners Buy Much

The store in the corner of Commerce is loaded with Navajo blankets, Hopi pottery, Navajo and Zuni jewelry. Two dull red strings of peppers blend into the color, and Mrs. Richardson recalls that she bought these on the trip she made into the Southwest in search of things for the store.

It's a pleasure running the store, she says. You have the feeling of working in a nonprofit organization and of helping the Indians dispose of their goods. And the clientele is pleasing to work with. Mrs. Richardson has found foreigners much more eager to get Indian goods than are Americans. Shipments go to all parts of Europe, and the embassy people are good customers. One bought $100 worth the other day.

Zona Gale Dies In Chicago at 65

had occupied her largely in recent years.

Zona Gale believed that since she wrote about folks in small towns, she must live in one.

"How can an artist function in New York, with so few hours and so much food—or so little?" she once asked.

The Midwestern scene was consistently the theme of Miss Gale's work. She drew more than once on characters from Portage to people her novels. And the sleepy town, historic as a fur-trading center, responded by honoring her as its "best citizen."

Her novels included "Birth," "Faint Perfume," "Preface to a Life," and "Borgia." Short stories and essays are grouped in "Yellow Gentians and Blue," "Friendship Village Stories" and "Portage, Wisconsin." Her poetry is published in one volume, "The Secret Way." Plays were "Miss Lulu Bett," "Birth," and "Mr. Pitt."

Hull Warns Americas They May Face Force

Address Closes Parley; Roosevelt Claims Success, Belying Nazis

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lima, Peru, Dec. 27.—United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight warned the peoples of the Americas that they may have to deal with "vast and terrifying military machines . . . whose only final use could be to create the ruin of the world we have fixed in our thoughts."

Speaking at the closing gathering of the Eighth International Conference of American States, Hull declared this hemisphere's task "must be cast in the opposite direction."

"We choose, instead," he said, "to strengthen the bases and principles of peaceful relationship, order and equality among ourselves."

Roosevelt Claims Success

[In Washington, President Roosevelt said he regarded the Lima conference as a very great success. The United States delegation, he said, accomplished what it had gone to Peru to accomplish. His press conference remarks were occasioned by statements in the German press that the United States had failed in its mission at the conference.—Editor's note.]

Relating the "tale that is written in the hundreds of dispatches and cables that have come over our desks these past few years," Hull said:

"We know there has been great bitterness between nations. We know that agreements that appeared to offer the foundation of stability and order have disappeared in the turmoil of events . . . We know that in much of the world trust in any form of agreement has completely vanished. We know that might has stated it would have its way, and that it would recognize no equal except equal might."

Hull Stresses Unanimity

In contrast, he pictured developments at the Pan-American meeting here featured by the attaining of a great measure of unity in opposition to foreign threatening influences.

"Never before, I think," he said, "has the conference process set to work so promptly and operated with more serious determination as at this congress. Within three days we were candidly expressing our inner views; within two weeks we have succeeded in embodying them in unanimous declarations."

Hull spoke at a farewell banquet given by President Oscar Benavides of Peru.

Earlier in the evening the conference itself had been brought to a close on a keynote of peace and security in the Western Hemisphere by Foreign Minister Carlos Concha, of Peru.

"Step in Evolution"

The conference adjourned at 7:42 p. m., the delegates and others present immediately standing to sing the "Hymn of the Americas."

Concha, in summing up "The American Philosophy of Life," told the delegates that "all we seek is to strengthen our existence by means of ties that guarantee the perpetual existence of our institutions." He said the solidarity declaration "supports the existence of a purely American system which tends to conservation of peace and proscription of war."

"We can justly boast of having opened up through our efforts a new stage in the progressive evolution of the ideal of American solidarity," he declared.

Dr. Concha attributed extraordinary importance to the conference because of the Declaration of Lima—the declaration of Western Hemisphere solidarity and defense against foreign aggression.

All Nations Sign Summary

"It was urgently necessary for us to build up our proclaimed solidarity," he said, "and our facing of that duty and the satisfaction of such a fundamental condition give surpassing and exceptional value to the Lima assembly."

"From today on," he said, "we can affirm with absolute justification that this community has ceased to be a pious aspiration and has been converted into a living force called to function whenever required by a threat to our vital interests from foreign activities."

Foreign Minister Luis Lopez de Mesa, of Colombia, as the representative of the country which will be host to the ninth Pan-American Conference in 1943, also spoke.

All the nation had signed the "final act" of the conference, containing 111 resolutions but not a single treaty or convention, before the closing ceremony was called to order by Concha in the Peruvian Chamber of Deputies.

U. S. Group Sail Today

Lima, Dec. 27 (AP).—The eighth Pan-American Conference, characterized by statesmen as the most important meeting ever held among the American republics, closed tonight.

United States delegates finished their packing this evening, drove to the nearby port of Callao and boarded the liner Santa Maria, which sails tomorrow.

One of the most significant events of the day was a farewell meeting of a bloc of 12 countries which developed unexpectedly before the conference and held together throughout.

The meeting was held in the hotel room of Juan J. Remos, Cuban secretary of state, who played host to heads of delegations of Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Mexico, Colombia and Venezuela.

thing of the sort ever before conceived in this country, or, for that matter, in the world."

To Stimulate Industry

Both the President and the authority emphasized that the program would stimulate a healthy development of the aircraft manufacturing industry, in addition to building up a soundly trained aeronautical reserve of young men.

"Only by such an approach," said the agency's statement, "can the United States adequately safeguard itself against the vast aerial militarization programs now being pressed with fanatical zeal by foreign powers unless it is to emulate their warlike preparations.

"It is more in keeping with the American spirit of preparedness to build up a great pool of men and machines, dedicated to and engaged in the pursuits of peace, but yielding first place to no other nation in flying skill or technical development, and quickly adaptable to military needs in the event of war."

No New Funds Needed

The new civilian-training program apparently will be launched under existing authorizations. Meantime the President is expected to outline added funds and authorizations needed for his broader defense program in a special message to Congress either at the outset or shortly after the session convenes.

At the Capitol, Democratic leaders said the President's national defense proposals have struck a popular chord of approval and predicted they will meet with little effective opposition.

In announceing plans for youth training in civil aeronautics, the President pointed out that a number of colleges already have inaugurated similar programs. It was stressed that the plan simply gives aviation its place in the vocational training system already established in public and private schools, on which $22,000,000 of Federal funds now is expended annually.

Fifty Hours of Flying

The CAA statement said the program was developed following conferences with leaders in the aviation industry. It provides not only for advanced training of the best-qualified student pilots throughout their college careers but for "alumni-refresher" training thereafter.

In the preliminary test, 50 hours of dual instruction and solo flying will be provided for the first group of 300—more than sufficient to qualify candidates for the private pilot's certificate issued by the CAA.

As a prerequisite to all flight training, adequate ground school courses will be provided in the program. CAA officials said "sketchy and sometimes nonexistent" ground instruction of student pilots now is one of the serious weaknesses in the "more or less haphazard development of private flying to date."

Safer Planes Proposed

To remedy this, and to bring down the "alarmingly high percentage of accidents" in private flying, the agency proposed:

That the standards of flight instruction and subsequent flying operations be raised by sane and constructive regulation; and

That the development and use of inherently safer aircraft be required.

The authority specifically urged that steps be taken to encourage "built-in-safety" or use of proven safety features in the fundamental design of aircraft built for use of private fliers. It said its objective is basic improvement in the vehicle used for flight training, as well as in methods of instruction.

The agency emphasized that it has no intention of "infringing on the prerogatives of the armed forces of the United States," but is determined rather to supplement their work and assist in it.

Air Bases Under Way

Development of air bases to provide facilities for the contemplated expansion of the Army Air Corps already is under way at a cost of many millions of dollars and still greater sums probably will be made available by Congress in the immediate future.

Although specific estimates are being withheld until President Roosevelt submits the budget to Congress, present activities give an indication of the building program to be inaugurated.

Most significant new construction will be an Alaskan air base, possibly at Fairbanks, where it is expected facilities for planes and Army personnel will be provided at cost of $10,000,000.

Within continental United States work is under way on the first of six air bases authorized by the Wilcox act. At Tacoma, Wash., $625,000 is being spent for facilities for 50 to 100 planes.

The act directs that the six bases be located in the Atlantic northeast, the Atlantic southeast-Caribbean area, at another point in the southeast, in the Pacific northwest, Alaska and the Rocky Mountain area.

Scott Field, Ill., is being prepared at a cost of $3,500,000 as a headquarters base for the G. H. Q. air force and as an intermediate operating station between the East and West coasts.

Airline Reserve Sought

Establishment of an Airline Pilots Reserve Corps to train commercial fliers for their duties in time of national emergency will be advocated at the coming session of Congress by Senator-elect Mead, of New York.

Under the provisions of a bill Mead will introduce in opening days of the session, commercial pilots would be sent to Army camps for training in military aviation for at least a month each year. Tactical training, under general supervision of the Secretary of War, would be provided by military fliers using regular Army equipment. Commercial pilots would receive commissions in the reserves and advance in rank as their training progressed, but they would be called to active duty only in time of war.

1,500 Captured, 5 Towns Fall To Franco

Offensive, Now in 5th Day, Has Barcelona For Ultimate Goal

By the Associated Press.

Zaragoza, Spain, Dec. 27.—The Spanish insurgents claimed occupation of five towns, capture of 1,500 prisoners and seizure of large quantities of war supplies in a sweep through Catalonian sectors today.

The towns were Aspa and Soleras, about 10 miles southeast of Lerida, and Masana, Santa Maria de Maya and Alos de Balaguer, about 30 miles north of Lerida in the Monsech mountain region.

Rapid in All Sectors

Insurgent officers said the advance was pushed rapidly in all sectors of the Catalonian front, where Gen. Franco's armies were in the fifth day of their long-awaited offensive aimed at Barcelona.

Communiques described today's thrust as one of the biggest of the current drive, listing the capture of nearly a score of mountain positions from which government forces were driven with heavy machine-gun and artillery fire.

North of Lerida, the Insurgents said, they captured a hydro-electric power station at Cap de la Sierra, near Cabo.

May Shift Capital

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish frontier), Dec. 27 (AP).—Spanish insurgent armies were credited with new gains in Catalonia today and the Spanish government was reported considering the transfer of its capital from Barcelona, chief objective of the insurgent offensive.

In the five days of the new drive insurgents estimated they had cut 230 square miles from Catalonia, the northwestern third of government Spain which is separated from the Madrid-Valencia area by an insurgent wedge to the Mediterranean 100 miles southwest of Barcelona.

A shift of the government capital to the south was regarded as certain if the insurgent advance approched Barcelona itself.

France Borrows $95,130,000 to Pay Foreign Rail Debts

Paris, Dec. 27 (AP).—Finance Minister Paul Reynaud announced tonight that the French government had obtained a loan of 175,000,000 florins (about $95,130,000) from Dutch and Swiss banks to pay off virtually the entire French railroad debt abroad.

"This operation," he said, "is without precedent in the financial history of France."

France's long-term railroad debt abroad, which amounted to about 3,500,000,000 francs (about $92,050,000 at current rate) at interest rates of as high as 6½ per cent, will be converted to a new 30-year loan at 4 per cent, Reynaud said.

Felix Morley to Discuss Munich Pact Tonight

Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, will be guest speaker tonight at 8:30 p. m. at the last meeting of the year of Argo Lodge, No. 413, B'nai B'rith at the Jewish Community Center. He will discuss "The Background and Aftermath of the Munich Agreement."

Dr. Ivy A. Pelzman, retiring president, will relinquish office to the new president, Seymour S. Guthman, at the meeting.

Nazis Cartoon U.S. Fear, Proposing To Empty Atlantic

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Dec. 27.—The Nazis' odd sense of humor manifested itself today in full force in a series of comic forecasts of developments for 1939, illustrated by a full page of cartoons in the Schwarz Korps.

The United States and its personalities come in for a major share of the ironical attacks. Other objects of mockery include the Roman Catholic Church and Cark Gable.

The Schwarz Korps predicts that "the poor boys of the Nazi labor service will be forced to empty the Atlantic ocean" with bottles, so "the Germans can march across to the United States," an effort to make fun of Roosevelt's alleged "fears" of authoritarian states.

It says Clark Gable will have to shoot himself, out of wounded vanity, as he compares unfavorably with Anthony Eden; and that colored folks in the United States will increase in numbers mysteriously, but that it will be discovered these people are white Americans who turned black after hearing radio lies.

Another forecast was that it "will be so cold that "one won't be able to weep over the fate of German Jews without carrying an acetylene torch. The torch will be used to melt the icicles formed by their tears." The cartoon shows two Catholic clericals using torches on their ice-encrusted faces.

Toll in Rumanian Rail Crash Mounts

Bucharest, Dec. 27 (AP).—Fatalities in the worst railway accident in Rumania's history mounted today to 93 as more of the victims of the Christmas Day collision of passenger trains near Etulea, in Bessarabia, succumbed to injuries.

The trains which crashed, both locals, were crowded with persons making Christmas visits from village to village.

Jews Guide U. S. Polices Toward Nazis, Gayda Says

Rome, Dec. 27 (AP).—Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor who frequently reflects the views of Premier Mussolini, today diagnosed the critical attitude of the United States toward Germany as internal political maneuvering "guided by the hand of subterranean Jewish action."

"The formula of the Jewish-Communist-Masonic coalition which envelops Roosevelt's policy has become today a fighting arm against the republican movement, which showed itself to be gaining ground in the recent elections," Gayda wrote in the Girnale D'Italia.

He said that American policy impelled him to inform the United States that "Italy and the Italians are completely solid with Germany."

2 More Report They Make Glass Invisible

M. I. T. Scientists Find Veneer Independent Of Schenectady Woman

A freak of science, in which researchers working independently perfected inventions almost identical by different methods, was revealed here yesterday when the American Physical Society heard two members from the faculty of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Drs. C. Hawley Cartwright and A. Francis Turner, the M. I. T. scientists, reported they have successfully produced a "varnish" which practically eliminates reflection by glass and results in the transmission of 99.6 per cent of the light.

The presentation of their paper came one day after Dr. Katharine B. Blodgett had described, in Schenectady, N. Y., her preparation of a film which has the same practical application as that of Drs. Cartwright and Turner.

Ready for Spectacles

The American Physical Society speakers said their compound now was ready for use on optical instruments. It may be some time, however, before its magicay properties are demonstrated on the show windows or retail stores.

Windows so treated would be invisible, so the film would have to be used with discretion.

The M. I. T. scientists evaporated fluorides of magnesium, sodium and certain other elements in a tungsten heater to produce their film, which is four-thousandths of an inch in thickness. In announcing her find, Dr. Blodgett did not disclose its chemical formula or her methods in obtaining the compound.

The fluoride film's development was based upon Fresnell's reflection laws, expounded in 1842, and the discovery of Dr. Irving Langmuir that oily substances can be spread to the almost incredible thinness of a single molecule.

Wide Benefits Seen

Wearers of eyeglasses, art lovers, astronomers, photographers—almost everyone will benefit from the invention, directly or indirectly, if it is exploited to the full.

Paintings in museums can be protected by glass without impairment of the viewer's enjoyment. Camera lenses will have faster speeds. The efficiency of telescopes, binoculars and periscopes will be markedly increased.

A paper presented to the society yesterday which may help materially in the fight against cancer was that of Drs. Alexander Hollaender and Peter A. Cole, who described a biological method for detecting the presence of the cancer-producing compound methylcholanthrene.

By chemical means, methylcolanthren e can be detected when it occurs in a one-part-to-a-million solution; by physical, one to ten million. But Drs. Hollaender and Cole, studying the deadly effect which the chemical has on the micro-organisms composing brewer's yeast, were able to detect presence of methylcholanthrene when it occurred in the ratio of only one part to a billion.

The two biologists are attached to the Washington Biophysical Institute and Division of Industrial Hygiene, National Institute of Health.

Mrs. Roosevelt Decries Apathy Of Women Voters

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, commenting yesterday on the decrease in the number of women holding public office, attributed the decline to apathy on the part of women voters. There are plenty of capable women ready to run for office if they thought other women would back them up, she said.

Her comment followed a plea made by Miss Marguerite Wells, president of the National League of Women Voters, for increased participation of women in American democracy.

Mrs. Roosevelt frankly said that women as a whole don't back women for public positions. She said the women of America haven't suffered sufficiently to get to the point where they feel something must be done.

Told by a woman reporter that toys on sale this Christmas included toy soldiers throwing hand grenades, operating machine guns and carrying stretchers, Mrs. Roosevelt said they were unwise and unfortunate.

Farm Bloc Forms To Push 'Cost of Production' Plan

By the Associated Press.

A nonpartisan group of Senators and Representatives from agricultural States is being formed to sponsor a "cost-of-production" farm program in the new Congress.

Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, said yesterday members had suggested that this group, including both Democrats and Republicans, agree on a specific program and then confer with Secretary Wallace before offering the legislation.

"Many members favor retaining the soil conservation part of the present act and junking the crop reduction features," said Frazier, who has supported many Administration measures.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, who weathered President Roosevelt's drive against him in the primary and was re-elected in November, said the present program "was designed to serve a temporary need" and "must have violent rearrangement."

with election of Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, as minority leader apparently assured.

Senate Minority Leader McNary said last night he has fixed no time for the Senate Republican conference, which probably will be held after Congress convenes.

Rayburn to See President

Back from Texas yesterday, House Majority Leader Rayburn declined to discuss the session's legislative outlook pending a conference with the President today. Rayburn is expected to confer also with Speaker Bankhead, who returned last week, and Representative Boland, of Pennsylvania, House Democratic whip.

The House Majority Leader declined comment on the reported decision to hold Republican Rules Committee membership to its present limit of four and to add only two Republicans to the Ways and Means Committee.

Representative Martin is expected vigorously to protest the decision. He had asked for another Republican on the Rules Committee, which handles legislative traffic to the House, and three more minority members of the Way and Means group, which formulates tax policies.

Boland Switch Expected.

Decision to deny the Republican Rules Committee request followed defeat of two strong Administration stalwarts on the committee in the last election, Representatives Greenwood, of Indiana, and Harlan, of Ohio. These losses offset the Administration's purge of former Chairman John O'Connor, and defeat of Representative Driver, of Arkansas, Democratic conservative.

Representative Sabath, of Illinois, next chairman, is virtually the only 100 per cent New Dealer left on the committee, but leaders hope to bulwark its Administration strength in filling the four Democratic vacancies.

To strengthen the Administration's hand in the House, Majority Whip Boland may be assigned either to the rules group or the Ways and Means Committee. Boland now holds only one committee post in addition to his duties as whip, a seat on the Naval Affairs Committee. This post he is expected to resign to fill a more strategic vacancy.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements found in many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and most important of all, Beechwood Creosote nicely blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because in it you get a good dose of Creosote emulsified so that it is palatable, and may be taken frequently by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones due to common colds that hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained.

Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Two Distinct Issues

Senator Burke is reported to have given warning that he will try to block confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith's reappointment as a member of the National Labor Relations Board unless support develops for certain desired changes in the labor relations act. Such a vote-trading offer does no credit to the Senator.

Any deal of this character would preclude consideration on its merits alone of the radical plan for revising the labor relations act indorsed by Senator Burke. Moreover, it would prevent an impartial appraisal of Mr. Smith's fitness for the important administrative post to which the President has reappointed him. Senator Burke asserted in a public address on Monday that the NLRB has "gone far outside the law." Since that is the Senator's opinion, it is difficult to understand why he would under any circumstances vote for the confirmation of a member of the present Labor Board.

Only confusion can result from an attempt to link together two totally unrelated issues. When voting upon Mr. Smith's appointment the Senate should consider only his personal qualifications and his past record, with due allowance, of course, for the imperfections of the law which he has helped to enforce. To make his confirmation depend upon such an irrelevant condition as the willingness of the Senate to modify the labor relations act in accordance with Senator Burke's wishes would be an utterly irresponsible proceeding.

The demoralizing character of any offer to trade votes for men against votes for impersonal legislative measures would soon become evident if the practice became widespread. We certainly should not like to see the confirmation of Federal Reserve Board or Federal Trade Commission appointees made contingent upon the promise of Senators to vote for changes in the banking and antitrust laws. Yet that would be quite as reasonable as to let Mr. Smith's confirmation depend upon the readiness of his backers in the Senate to support Senator Burke's plan for revising the labor relations act.

Universal Pensions

It is difficult to imagine a more inappropriate time than the present to launch a drive for more pensions for veterans and their dependents. The next session of Congress will be asked to vote large sums for national defense, in spite of a badly unbalanced budget. As pointed out by the American Veterans Association, a pensions drive would come into inevitable conflict with national defense needs.

Veterans' organizations should be the last groups to interpose any obstacle in the path of national defense. If their demands for "preparedness" on the part of the United States mean anything, they should certainly extend to preparedness on the part of the Treasury to meet the obligations of an essential rearmament program.

There are other reasons which should operate to stop the anticipated new pensions drive before it gets under way. Congress has been very generous in granting benefits, including free hospitalization, to veterans. Many thousands who saw no fighting are drawing compensation for disabilities. If a veteran suffered only a 10 per cent disability traceable to wartime service, his wife is entitled to a monthly pension at his death.

By prepayment of the bonus, moreover, Congress fully compensated veterans for their services. To the disabled, the war dead and their dependents the Government owes a permanent obligation. But to veterans who returned from training camps unscathed (less than one-third of the World War veterans saw any actual fighting) the Government now owes no special consideration.

It is very unfortunate that some of these veterans are in need. But their claims upon the Government are no greater than those of other citizens. They must rely for aid upon the social security system, upon the WPA or local relief. To treat veterans not injured in the war as a class apart, entitled to special privileges, would be a social injustice as well as a heavy strain upon the Treasury.

It can be asserted that present criticism of pensions bills is premature, as preceding any general drive for enactment of these measures. But the pensions racket has been carried so far that opposing groups can no longer afford to take a merely defensive attitude, as is obviously recognized by a large number of the veterans themselves.

Achievement At Lima

At Lima the tumult and the shouting are over; the delegates who have been participating in the eighth Pan-American Conference have begun to leave for their homes.

Was the conference a success? Did it accomplish what it set out to achieve? Can it be said to have come up to intelligent expectations?

The answer to these related questions is in the affirmative. The conference obviously did not do what each and every delegation wanted it to do. No really co-operative conference ever does. The 21 republics represented at Lima did not and do not see eye to eye on all matters of detail and emphasis. Disagreements between them were bound to occur, with the result that some of the resolutions finally approved were, of necessity, compromises between opposing points of view. But that, after all, is the democratic way of doing things, and the Lima parley was wholly in the democratic tradition.

On basic principles the 21 republics did manifest a very remarkable degree of unanimity. They approved the resolution condemning religious and racial persecution everywhere. Similarly, they condemned in this hemisphere what Secretary Hull has called "the collective political activity of groups of aliens." In the economic sphere they unitedly threw their support behind a declaration against unreasonable trade barriers and in favor of less fettered commerce between nations.

The conference also approved the eight-point peace program first expounded by Secretary Hull on July 16, 1937, as the Americas' guide of conduct in international affairs. This "Declaration of American Principles" pledges the republics of this hemisphere to the peaceful settlement of all international disputes. It rules out force as an instrument of national or international policy. It declares that "respect for, and the faithful observance of treaties, constitute the indispensable rule for the development of peaceful relations between states." And it proscribes as inadmissible "the intervention of any state in the internal or external affairs of another."

But most important of all the acts of the conference was the approval of the declaration that bears its name. Indeed, the inter-American conference of 1938 will probably go down in history as the one that gave birth to the Declaration of Lima.

This significant statement of principle reveals the republics of this hemisphere as standing united in defense of their liberties and their republican institutions, "against all foreign intervention or activities." It pledges them to "make effective their solidarity." And it provides machinery whereby this can be done. In this particular, to cite Mr. Hull once again, it goes beyond the Buenos Aires consultation agreement of 1936, even as that went beyond the Latin-American antiwar pact of 1933. Clearly, therefore, the co-operative spirit is on the march in the New World; the sense of unity and common interest is growing.

At a time when totalitarian dictatorships are eager to extend their principles and influence to this hemisphere, the Lima parley shows that these efforts are not to go unchallenged. In defense of peace and democracy, of racial harmony, of religious tolerance and of economic freedom, the New World has now stepped in to redress the shattered balance in the Old.

Alternative To Chaos

In its Monthly Review, published in London, the Midland Bank recently pointed out that "within the past seven years governmental policy has come to be the dominating factor in international currency relations." And stabilization funds are instrumentalities for giving effect to governmental policies in respect to exchange relations.

Indeed, in a world constantly agitated by political alarms and by an apparently endless series of economic disturbances resulting in wholesale flights of capital and mass gold movements, the need for official intervention to moderate the severity of fluctations in exchange rates is generally conceded. That being the case, continuance of the Treasury's stabilization fund beyond June 30, 1939, as recommended by Secretary Morgenthau, seems virtually assured.

Since the operations of the stabilization fund are shrouded in secrecy, its importance as a stabilizing influence cannot be precisely appraised. It is generally agreed, however, that the United States authorities, in collaboration with the managers of the British and French stabilization funds, have succeeded in offsetting, to some extent, the disturbing effects of extensive international capital flights. While such intervention has not prevented a severe depreciation in the franc since the French stabilization fund was established and, more recently, a sharp drop in the pound in terms of the dollar, declines have undoubtedly been more orderly and less upsetting as a result of official controls.

Of course the existing situation is highly unsatisfactory by comparison with the stability of the exchanges in the days when gold was accepted as an international standard of value and when exchange rates fluctuated within very narrow and well-defined limits. However, until a return to more orderly world conditions is assured, the alternative to official exchange control would appear to be exchange chaos.

The Growth Of Madness

Many outside the medical fraternity will follow with intense interest the comprehensive symposium on mental health now being held at Richmond in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. For it does not require the training of a physician to realize the fundamental importance of this inquiry to the future of the Nation.

Mental patients, it is said, at present occupy more hospital beds in the United States than every other type of case combined. And the number of mentally sick, many of whom are under no medical supervision, is steadily increasing. It could scarcely be otherwise in a society where nervous strains, often beyond the endurance capacity of the ordinary human being, are multiplying with the rapidity which characterizes contemporary civilization.

The correlation between mental breakdown and acute apprehensiveness of a type now prevalent was graphically illustrated yesterday at the opening session of the symposium in Richmond. Dr. Norman Maier, of the University of Michigan, described certain experiments by which rats can easily be driven into permanent mental eccentricity. The rodent is placed in a position from which there are alternative exits but no sure path of escape. Then it is terrified by the sudden release of a roaring blast of compressed air. The combination of fright and frustration, of reiterated nervous stimulation and constant uncertainty, in time produces an obviously convulsive animal.

Analogies from this lugubrious experiment are not far to seek. Millions of individuals under the conditions of modern society are in essentially the same plight as the simultaneously terrified and baffled rat. The conjunction of pressures and restraints can in time become too much for mental endurance. And it is obvious that strains of precisely this sort are bearing down with increasing force on the present generation.

The growth of these maladjustments, and the most effective means of treating those who succumb to them, is being carefully examined at the Richmond meeting. A year of preparation has gone to integrating the scientific papers now being discussed there, with the result that publication of the whole well-rounded proceedings is expected greatly to assist the improvement of mental hygiene methods.

The numerous collaborating organizations, including the United States Public Health Service, are primarily interested in developing scientific study of the causes and cures of insanity. Control of the conditions which are so rapidly increasing mental disease is not their responsibility. Such control, however, must before long be intelligently attempted by organized society. A community which conquers bodily plagues, but finds itself increasingly subject to madness, is taking one step forward and two back along the path of progress.

New Speedway

A new superhighway between Baltimore and Washington was one of the campaign promises made by Gov. Nice prior to the November election. The residents of both cities will be delighted that this project is to be carried through in spite of Mr. Nice's defeat.

The Maryland State Planning Commission has found that Baltimore and Washington are spreading toward each other at the rate of about 4 square miles per year. It is time that the entire region between these two cities and running east to Chesapeake Bay be subjected to careful planning. As a step in that direction, the proposed non-stop highway on the roadbed of the old W. B. & A. Railroad will be a welcome development.

Equally important are the traffic safeguards which this thoroughfare will provide. Apparently motorists will be permitted to speed between the two cities without any danger of interference from cross-traffic, sharp turns or other hazards common on highways designed a few years ago. All known safety devices are to be installed. The new speedway should be an answer to motorists' most fervent hopes.

But will it reduce accidents? Or will the greater speed resulting from the elimination of road hazards bring about a still larger number of casualties? The record of this proposed speedway will be closely watched from that point of view. And the findings may have an important effect upon the development of traffic arteries in other parts of the country.

Make a better mousetrap and the Government will crack down on you for creating a monopoly.

All right, World, take your choice: Come to peace, or go to pieces.

Milk Distribution

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Virginia dairyman wants an investigation of the milk industry in Washington because he is getting only 6 cents a gallon for 30 per cent of the milk he ships to Washington. If he shipped to Baltimore he would get less. The way the farmers voted in Maryland and Virginia, I thought they liked monopoly-controlled politicians.

Milk producers know that, regardless of the fact that milk must be produced under the strictest conditions and grade in the United States, it is a trifling cost in a city dairy. Bottles, and the loss of them, bad bills and pretty trucks, with high-salaried presidents, interest and political contributions are the main expenses of a city dairy.

Maryland milk producers are planning for an RFC loan to build a distributing dairy in Washington to sell milk for 10 cents a quart cash weekly. The promoters' names cannot be given out at present as they would loose their present market as they did in other cities for thinking of such an outrageous scheme. JOHN RIGGLES.

The Bible

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When I was a boy practically every home in our neighborhood had family prayer and daily Bible study, which seems to be a rarity today. In my opinion there is hardly a home in our country which has not at least one copy of the Bible stored away, and yet there are very few who read the Bible thoroughly and use it as first choice for reading. It seems to be a closed book with little or no bearing on many lives.

There is some reason why the best seller is seldom read. I am not writing for the purpose of clarifying but rather to emphasize that the Bible is a record of what God has done for mankind and to indicate what it will do if people will go back to it for their health and peace of mind. Religious belief has nothing to do with the results to be obtained from reading and studying this book. It contains the truth and the truth is what heals and brings peace of mind. I know whereof I speak because I have been healed of fever and pain, sorrow and resentment by reading certain lessons in both the Old and New Testaments.

Ministers who study to show themselves "approved unto God" will promote a strong movement back to God if they will preach how much healing power there is in the Word which is inspired of God.

Removing The Yule Tree

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As to mind and method in the relatively important work of dismantling and discontinuance of Yuletide decorations, with special reference to Yule trees, your correspondent refuses to believe that many people go about this work all ignorant of the fine sentiments involved or that they yield themselves as tools of a spirit of desecration by careless or uninterested procedures in these matters.

We should not drag down our Christmas trees as though attending a lynching party and they should not be dumped unceremoniously into the confines of some untidy back lot or alley, there to sprawl ignominiously until carted away to some unthinkable destiny such as the "dumps" we unfortunately have come to know.

Let us go about this sad but necessary work with our emotions mellowed and purified by the wholesome meditations of the season through which we have just passed. Let us light our sacrificial fires and in this approved and historic way make final disposition of all Yuletide properties not to be preserved.

Our last affections should, in the renewal of our minds and spirits and in the graces of transformation, be greater than our first. Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget, lest we forget.

Tribute To Masaryk

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent edition of The Post there appeared an attack upon Czecho-Slovakia's first President, Thomas G. Masaryk. The writer not only hid his identity in an indefinite classification, but also failed to cite "chapter and verse."

As President Masaryk is no longer living, he cannot defend himself. His life and deeds, however, are a matter of historical record, and that record can speak for itself. He had nothing in common with communism as that manifested itself in Russia, for he was democratic to the core, a believer in democratic government and a lover of all humanity. On the other hand, communism in Russia was anything but democratic. It was intolerant and despotic. It started out to establish the "dictatorship of the proletariat" and ended up with the dictatorship of Stalin.

For the same reasons Masaryk could not have been a great admirer of Stalin who showed himself to be cruel and ruthless. The charges that Masaryk was a "cruel stepfather to the Ukrainians of Ruthenia" and that he exerted "pressure upon the hapless Ukrainians" are also completely out of harmony with his character. The insinuation that he promised "complete Russianization" of the people of Ruthenia, in return for Russia's assistance, sounds fantastic to say the least, if, indeed, it has any meaning. I am also unable to make out what it would mean to be "made into a Mongol Russian," since the Russians are not Mongols, but a Slavic people.

Czecho-Slovakia fell, not because of the "Masaryk system," or because "Stalin turned tail," but because she was surrounded by ravenous wolves and because the great democracies deserted her at the last minute.

Incidentally, Czecho-Slovakia was never ruled by her Presidents, either Masaryk or Benes, and she is not ruled by Hacha today. Under Masaryk and Benes she was ruled by her cabinets, which were responsible to her Parliament. Today, she is ruled from Berlin by the Nazis. Czecho-Slovakia is not a free country today, and there is much evidence that many of the things that are taking place there do not represent the wishes of either her people or her nominal government, but are dictated from Berlin. And that is why the "drear old picture on the wall" had to be taken down.

Masaryk will live in the hearts of his people long after his critics have been forgotten.

New Name For U. S. A.?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is thought that the average "American" citizen is unaware of the fact that his or her country is the only one in the world, large or small, that does not have either an exclusive or distinctive name of its own.

For example: Why aren't the consular representatives of Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, Chile and the rest of the 20 Latin-American countries American consuls? They are in truth but do not call themselves so because each of their countries has a name of its own. Also, why is a native of Curacao, Trinidad, Peru or Canada, not called an "American citizen?" They are, as far as the name goes.

For a number of years, and rightly so, we have been making increasing efforts to perpetuate and stimulate our friendly relations with the Latin-American countries; and yet the average citizen of our country when speaking to a citizen of, let us say, Argentina, Mexico or Peru, will probably remark in a somewhat superior tone: "Oh, I am an 'American;'" not realizing that, as far as nomenclature or reality is concerned, his usually patient but often somewhat annoyed listener is equally as much an "American" as himself.

The writer ventures the suggestion that it is high time the so-called "United States of America" (Brazil and several other South American countries could quite correctly use the designation "United States of America") should adopt an appropriate and distinctive, as well as exclusive, name. He would frown on either Colombia (already taken) or Columbia, as well as any derivation of America, since neither Columbus nor Vespucci had anything to do with what we call the "U. S. A."

Why not Washingtonia, Freedomia, or even New Dealia—but let's have a truly distinctive and exclusive name for the greatest Nation on earth. MANANA.

Washington, Dec. 26.

A California View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading The Washington Post, my attention has been called to statements from some Senators and Representatives, opposing the Administration relative to WPA work, etc.

In the opinion of the writer, they are just barking to hear the echo of their bark. Who wants to return to the condition we had in 1930, 1931, 1932 and a portion of 1932? It would be suicide to return to that condition—with 15,000,000 people affected by that condition then—nothing to eat, nothing to wear, drifting and shifting; about a million of them were young women—sleeping in tumbledown shacks for the night, in old box cars, on sidetracks and under bridges. No, God forbid that the American people will ever allow that condition to prevail again!

No doubt in the mind of the writer but the WPA workers are doing a little political work in favor of the Administration—why not? The present Administration conceived an idea that put food on their tables, clothes on their backs and gave shelter for their families. Certainly no good American would condemn those workers for favoring the present Administration, politically.

The Post Impressionist

Important Men

THE IRREPRESSIBLE TOMPKINS had had, apparently, some disagreeable experience, for he was quite fussed up. He breezed into our harmless coterie and began exploding like a bunch of firecrackers:

"Now all of you know me to be the quietest, the most respectful, the most urbane of men. I am willing to admit that every man is important to himself; I can even concede that Maj. Nutt carries some weight somewhere, but——"

"Mr. Tompkins, how many times must I remind you to leave me out of your discussions?"

"Oh, well, Major, I was merely pointing to you as illustrating a general truth. The same remark applies equally to all present, including myself. But to resume: When a man's personal importance spreads until, in his own eyes, he is the only important thing in this great universe, there I kick—and I'm liable to kick his shins.

"Today was my unlucky day. Coming downtown in a streetcar my bad luck began. Every seat but one was fully occupied. That was a double seat over which some cribbiter had blown himself up until he covered the whole area. He wasn't such a big man physically, either; but, boy, he was important. You could tell that by the way he rustled his paper, cleared his throat, and spread himself. So, after strap-hanging and stanchion-clutching for about half a mile, I summoned up courage enough to ask him in my most polite tone: 'Are you saving this seat for someone?' If I had been tinder, the look he gave me would have burnt me up. Then, seeing that I was in earnest in my desire to find a perch, he grudgingly moved a little closer to the window leaving unoccupied a scant third of the double seat.

"Well, I took it, that third. Then he increased his paper-rattling and throat-clearing and general fussiness.

"Yes, sir; that's the kind of puffed-up toad that started me off wrong this morning. But, boy! I got his goat before I reached my destination. Someone vacated a single seat on the opposite side of the car; whereupon I arose and bowed very profusely to Mr. Throat-Clearer and said: 'Col. Hawkins-Pitt, I thank you very much for your courtesy in permitting me to sit beside you; but I shall take a less exalted place.'

"That was just too bad, and I should not have said it. He turned purple with rage and spluttered something which luckily I didn't catch—and at the next stop I got off.

"Well, that start for the day, I claim, was 100 per cent bad. And, so, when I reached my office I went into my inner sanctum, closed the door, and went into the silence. You standardized economic royalists don't know what going into the silence means. Well, I can't tell you just now; but, when I came out, ready to keep an appointment with an official of one of our alphabetical Governmental units, I was washed clean of all ugly feeling—I was almost sanctified, I felt.

"It was in this somewhat humbled spirit that I went to meet the Hon. J. Scurvy Scratchback.

"Now, I have a large acquaintance among Government servants, and, as a class, I take off my hat to them: they are public servants and they do their work in a kindly, impersonal way that is courteous, considerate, and just. But, I had not met the Hon. Scurvy Scratchback.

"After I had cooled my heels in the outer office—I had an appointment for 10 o'clock sharp, and it was then 10:20—I was ushered in to the August Presence. And there's where my sanctity began to slip away—but I held on to its coat-tails while the Honorable Second Assistant to the Third Assistant Director of the XYZ Authority fussed with a few papers on his desk and made a pencil note or two. After I had stood a few minutes in the middle of his room, cooling my heels further and warming up my spleen, Mr. Scurvy looked up and said: 'Oh! I beg your pardon, Mr. Thompson, won't you be seated.'

"Tompkins is my name, sir," and I gently referred to the subject of my visit.

"Quite so, quite so," he replied. Whereupon he launched out into a long explanation of the importance of his office and the perfectly obvious fact that no one in the country could fill it as he did. He told me stories all designed to illustrate what a wonderful fellow he was and how in debate with real lawyers of known ability he always came off victorious. When I called his attention to that statute under which my client claimed, he brushed the whole matter aside. He said: 'Mr. Thompson, you know this is the New Deal and yet you argue as though we still had the Old Deal. Today, we administrators look for the general weal and brush statutes and legal technicalities aside.'

"Well, the upshot was that I got just exactly nowhere by that interview. As I was walking away I met an old friend who said: 'Why, Tompkins, what's the matter? You look like you've just lost an important case!' To which I replied, 'I haven't lost an important case, but I've just been up against an important man.'

"'Say, that reminds me. Did I ever tell you about how easily one important man was called down?

"'Well, here it is. Many years ago there was a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission involving the freight rates on newsprint paper. The hearing was held in New York City and all the higher-ups in the business offices of the various journals were called.

"'Well, sir, they'd had the businessmen of the Herald, the Post, the Journal, on the stand; and in the afternoon a fussy little man was called.

"'He was asked his name, his residence, and then came the question: 'What is your business or profession?'

"'I am business manager of The World.'

"'Whereupon, one of the attorneys said, 'Some job! Some job!'"

PEGLER

ANYONE WHO recalls Adolf Hitler's hysterical insults to the President of Czechoslovakia only a few weeks ago must agree that in complaining of intemperate speech on the part of Harold Ickes, the Nazi government comes into court with filthy hands and a foul mouth. Since Hitler got away with that, he and his press have crowded their luck, and have gone so far as to edit the ballot in Britain and the press in numerous countries, and are trying to coerce the French courts in the celebrated Grynszpan case.

These developments, of themselves, may be none of this country's business, but they must be considered in connection with the Nazi threat of some time back to take an unpleasant interest in the affairs of that Nation, to wit, this one, whose people habitually wear their hats in the house, put their feet on the table and spit chewing gum at the walls. The Ickes speech and the ensuing protest affords a useful opportunity for the Nation of gangsters to declare itself on the subject of insulting repartee starting in Germany.

IT IS IDIOTIC and may yet prove tragic that nations must address each other in the terms of bums bawling along a bar in a low saloon, but the Germans sounded the pitch and have just about exhausted not only the patience but the nerves of the civilized races.

The same position that was expressed to the Nazi should be communicated to Mussolini's government, too, for the Italian press is no less official than the German and has been equally malicious.

Americans are inclined to overlook the fact that every dirty comment on the American people, the country and the Government which appears in a German or Italian paper has the same official character as an utterance by the Fuehrer or the Duce. A newspaper in either of those countries is as much a part of the government as the army or navy, and it is not correct to regard their writers as prostitutes of journalism, because they have no more right to refuse to write false or scurrilous matter about the Americans than an officer has to refuse to shell an open town in Spain, however unpleasant he may find the task.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPER comment is unofficial, and while it may be a more or less accurate expression of popular sentiment, the Government is not answerable for it. When Ickes sounds off, however, his remarks, if not disavowed, are official, but nothing that he and the President himself have said about Germany and Italy compare in hostility with the official expressions about this country which have appeared in the German and Italian press. And, of course, they have avoided the filth which is characteristic of the controlled press in those countries.

Since Munich, the Nazis have plainly indicated that certain Englishmen may be given responsible positions in the British government only at the risk of their displeasure, perhaps of war, and the British and French press both have choked up at times under the threats from Berlin and Rome, lest the free press be accused of provoking a war.

Italy aside for the moment, this country has now admonished Hitler to the same effect that Jimmy Gerard is said to have admonished the Kaiser when the all-highest remarked that there were vast numbers of Kaiser-true hyphenates dwelling in the United States who would sabotage this country in the event of trouble. Gerard's reply is said to have been that there was also a lamp-post from which to hang each of them.

IN THE PRESENT case the American Government has drawn a line and by implication has placed on the Nazi side of it all those conspirators belonging to the anti-American bunds and other fellow-traveling Nazi societies which have been carrying out the Nazi threat to take an unpleasant interest in American internal affairs.

As to the official character and responsible nature of the foul observations about this country which have appeared in Germany and Italy, the Germans openly accepted guilt only a short time ago when they demanded that the Greek government moderate the tone of its press toward Germany. The excuse was made that the Greek, like the German press, was not official, though it was controlled; and Berlin promptly replied that because the Greek press was controlled, the Nazis would regard its contents as official and hold the government responsible for all offensive utterances.

That covers the case between Berlin and Washington, too, and gives the Nazi a far greater list of offenses to apologize for than Ickes, LaGuardia and the President have amassed in their comparatively restrained comments to date.

Text of Hull's Last Address To Lima Parley Delegates

Text of the address by Secretary Hull at a farewell dinner at Lima, Peru, last night follows:

Mr. President:

I am deeply appreciative of the honor of speaking on behalf of the delegations of the 20 American republics which have been guests of the Peruvian government. Many of my colleagues could give more adequate and eloquent expression to the sentiments which I know we all share at this moment but none of them, I am sure, has a friendlier feeling, a greater faith in our common destiny, or a clearer certainty as to the eventual triumph of the principles and ideas which have guided us than I possess as a result of this conference.

For all of us I wish to thank you for the graceful courtesy, the steady kindness and the unexcelled hospitality which your government has shown. You, Mr. President, and Mme. Benavides, Dr. and Mrs. Concha, and every member of the Peruvian government have seemed to speak to us from the heart. We have felt that our introduction to your life and your people was no mere official or perfunctory one. It was born out of a ready friendship which has become fuller and more deeply felt as the days we have spent among you have passed. We have felt the same welcome from all your people. I will say to you and to them that each of us feel we have gained a friend and that your country may know that it has 20 friends.

Bitterness Cited

You have again tonight expressed the ideas and views which bring us together and which guide our common policy. Let me also, in the manner of a man talking with friends before parting, express most briefly a few reflections connected with the work on which we have been engaged.

We are primarily men drawn from the foreign offices of our countries. We know the tale that is written in the hundreds of dispatches and cables that have come over our desks these past few years. We know that there has been great bitterness between nations. We know that agreements that appeared to offer the foundation of stability and order have disappeared in the turmoil of events.

We know that in much of the world trust in any form of agreement has completely vanished. We know that might has stated it would have its way, and that it would recognize no equal except equal might. We know that the ordinary ends of living are being subordinated in the attempt to create vast and terrifying military machines whose first purpose might be to create terror, and whose only final use could be to create the ruin of the world we have fixed in our thoughts during this meeting of ours. Such is the world we may have to deal with.

Satisfaction Noted

Our task must be cast in the opposite direction. We choose, instead, to strengthen the bases and principles of peaceful relationship, order and equality among ourselves in the midst of this world.

We propose to express our common desire to work together more effectively to resist the spread of these conditions and influences to our continent. Looking at each other across this table of friendship I believe we can feel that we have discharged the responsibilities satisfactorily.

The Pan-American method is not always too well understood outside, especially by those who feel they must form their judgment instantaneously. The very essence of our process is the quiet exchange of views among equals.

In this matter—until a final decision is reached—each state has all the power of a majority.

Never before, I think, has the conference process set to work so promptly and operated with more serious determination as at this congress. Within three days we were candidly expressing our inner views; within two weeks we have succeeded in embodying them in unanimous declarations. Less difficult important matters have often caused prolonged delay, dissension and confusion.

A Delicate Task

If it is forgotten—personal experience makes it completely evident—how delicate a task it is to create a wholly satisfactory friendship. Relationships dictated by force or created in the design of self interests, run along only until the force is broken or abused, or until the self-interest changes. Then they end in disillusion, or worse.

We, however, are making a great effort for relationships based on trusting friendship. Such friendships grow slowly. They must be carefully respected and tended in a thousand ways. We are all determined that this must be the basis of our relationship, and that such friendship shall be its ruling bond.

We have here stated our agreements in declarations, rather than in treaties or conventions. That is wise when the matters dealt with are of general character and of political nature. The people of the American republics have a proud history of the use of declarations.

The national life has grown in and out of the declarations of independence which mark their birth. And so in this declaration of Lima lies the future of the solidarity of the American republics. It rests on the history and spirit of the peoples and such can be the only guarantee of its significance.

Faith in Republics

It will be determined—under test of grave events—by the constancy and ardor with which the American republics consecrate themselves to the great and creative task of keeping alive that program of principles which have guided us in our deliberations, and on which peace and well being under law and order must rest.

From my experience here I have absolute faith that each and every one of the 21 American republics will be faithful in this endeavor, and that each and every one will strive to the utmost to carry out the broad and essential program that has here been proclaimed. The utmost degree of vigilance, which only those who love liberty are capable of exerting, may be required.

Contribution to History

I turn again to you, Mr. President, as our host and thank you in the name of all the delegations. It was in Lima in times past that many congresses assembled and made their contribution to American history.

It must be a source of pride and satisfaction to you and every Peruvian that it was in Lima again that the labors begun so many years ago have gone further forward toward fruition.

On behalf of the delegates of the 20 American republics who have been guests at this conference, I raise my glass to our host, His Excellency the President of Peru, to his charming wife, and to the government and people of Peru, and wish them every success and happiness in the days to come.

Teachers Told Roosevelt Is a 'Master' Speaker

Cleveland, Dec. 27 (AP).—Public speaking teachers from throughout the Nation, in convention here, were advised today to take a lesson from "a master"—President Roosevelt.

The suggestion came from Dr. Sara Stinchfield Hawk, University of Southern California professor and a widely known psychologist.

"Mr. Roosevelt has that certain something every public speaker needs," she said. "It is simplicity and naturalness. One feels he is speaking to each listener individually. I can just picture him saying, 'Draw up the chairs, boys; I feel a fireside chat coming on.'"

Another speaker, James F. Bender, of Queens College, New York, called stuttering college students "more intelectual" than their classmates.

Lowell Thomas to Give Benefit Lecture

Lowell Thomas, radio news commentator, will lecture February 2 at Constitution Hall for benefit of the John S. Bennett Memorial building fund, Mrs. Jean Bennett, superintendent of Central Union Mission, announced yesterday.

Thomas will lecture on his world travels, Mrs. Bennett said.

Paper to Broadcast Facsimile Editions

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 27 (AP).—The Buffalo Evening News announced today that it would begin broadcasting tomorrow, on an experimental basis, of a daily radio edition.

The process, called facsimile broadcasting, will reproduce printed pages on "facsimile recorders" set up to receive them. The broadcasts, starting at 1 a. m., E. S. T., tomorrow, will originate in Station WBEN, owned and operated by the paper.

The Results of Lima

DOROTHY THOMPSON

At Lima the American republics have formulated a common foreign policy, which if it is properly implemented, will constitute the clearest counter program which has yet been framed to the policies of the two totalitarian internationals—the Comintern and the Fascintern.

The importance of this eight-point statement of policy should not be under-rated.

First of all, it is the clearest formulation of foreign policy which this country has had in generations.

If it becomes so fixed in the minds of our own people that it is taken, as the Monroe Doctrine has been for 115 years, as natural and continuous, it will greatly clarify our position in the world.

IT IS important in that it limits the blanket and unilateral interpretations that have been put in the past upon the Monroe Doctrine and that have often been a cause of strained relations and misunderstandings with the Latin-American republics.

It does not, for instance, support Theodore Roosevelt's interpretation of our responsibilities in the Latin-American countries which was expressed in 1911 in the words of Secretary of State Knox: "Whether rightfully or wrongfully, we are, in the eyes of the world and because of the Monroe Doctrine, held responsible for the order of Central America."

FOR THE first of the eight statements of principles is "The intervention of any state in the internal or the external affairs of another is inadmissible."

If that statement means anything at all it brings us bang up against the avowed policies of all of the totalitarian states, but particularly against those of Russia and Germany.

It is incompatible with the principles of Nazi Germany in respect to its own nationals and blood descendants in all countries.

Those principles have been enunciated time and again both in official statements and in actual laws.

A committee of sponsors headed by Charles C. Burlingham and containing a number of eminent lawyers and professors and one former Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, has recently performed a service by publishing the actual decrees of the Reich insofar as they affect Americans of German origin.

The book contains no comment whatsoever, simply facsimiles of the decrees as they have appeared in official publications, together with English translations.

If the publishers—the Oxford University Press—have not already sent it to every member of Congress, they should do so.

It makes it perfectly clear, first, that the National Socialist Party and the German state are a complete unity; second, that all cultural activities abroad are being organized as instruments of the state and party; third, that all Germans living in other countries are claimed by the party as its instruments, and fourth, that the entire program for mobilizing foreign Germans has as its object the spreading of the National Socialist world philosophy throughout the earth.

Point one is also completely incompatible with the policies of the Russian Comintern, which lays claim to the working classes of the whole world.

The Comintern has shifted its policy continually according to the international situation of Russia at any given moment, but it has never abandoned its messianic intention eventually to make over the world according to the pattern of the Soviet Union.

I CONSIDER this first point of the most critical importance, for it is perhaps the first official recognition of the use of the revolutionary weapon as an instrument of conquest.

Had such a policy been a clear part of the treaties which the small states of central Europe had with France, the whole picture there might have been very different.

It is interesting that the last chancellor of Austria, Dr. Schuschnigg, made exactly this point as a sine qua non for the maintenance of Austrian independence. He said in his book that unless the nations accepted the principle that one state had no right to interfere in the internal affairs of another state, every small country would eventually fall to the larger and more powerful ones.

But whether this policy is effective or not depends upon whether we are prepared to implement it.

That would mean that we should reject by every possible diplomatic pressure and by clear political action interventions which are announced or put into practice. Otherwise, it remains a pious platitude.

Nos. 2 and 3 reaffirm our allegiance to the Kellogg-Briand Pact, and Nos. 6 and 8 seek to substitute international collaboration for force.

How one can achieve international collaboration along cultural or economic lines with countries whose intellectual and economic programs are specifically designed not for co-operation but for propaganda and monopoly is not clear.

Six and eight are at present applicable to Pan America and could be extended to democratic countries. They cannot be extended elsewhere.

NUMBERS 4, 5 and 7 put into succinct form ideas repeatedly expressed by Mr. Hull: Namely, that our whole policy is based upon respect for international law and for the observance of treaties and is against any unilateral revision of them.

This puts all Pan America in a unique position in the world. Respect for treaties is not the fundamental basis of the foreign policy of any other country in the world today.

That it is not the basis of the policy of the British Empire has been demonstrated repeatedly in the last years.

We stood on this basis in preparing to resist the Japanese invasion of Manchukuo in 1931. We did not prepare to resist because of our interests in China. They were neglible. We prepared to resist because a treaty was being violated.

Similarly, the whole British argument in regard to Czecho-Slovakia runs completely afoul of this interpretation. The argument advanced by the British was, "Why should Englishmen risk war to save Czecho-Slovakia?" According to this American policy, that was not the issue. The issue would have been—had we been in the position of England—'What is our obligation in respect of an existing treaty?" and the policy formulated at Lima would have made it quite impossible for us to collaborate to break down the position of a nation tied to us in the second degree through an alliance with one of our allies.

Indeed, the eight points of the Pan-American foreign policy, as between themselves and as between Pan America and the rest of the world, have created a concert of international order which is very close to the ideas of the League of Nations.

It is also extremely American, for it puts over and above all relations the conception of justice under law.

It is an affirmation of the belief that there is no possible harmony between nations except on the basis of universally accepted principles of international intercourse expressed in terms of a sovereign law.

Its weakness, of course, it that it is not implemented, but if we should implement it only for ourselves we should in all probability chart a new course in international affairs.

Cards For The New Year.

A very happy new year, Frank,
With all the season's glories!
This greeting comes from every rank . . .
And even from the Tories!

For Mr. Hopkins

Wherever you spend New Year's
May you find joys galore,
But, Harry, won't you spend it—
And then spend nothing more!

For Mr. Ickes

Blessings of the season, sir,
With no verse oversloppy!
No matter what we think of you
You have been red-hot copy.

For Mr. Roper

Retired now.
Your exit's dated;
It seems to us
Frank might have waited.

For Jim Farley

A happy new year to you, Jim—
With Santa next year you may roam—
You'd be a grand aid, sir, for him,
And never miss a single home.

Kris Kringle has a record, boy,
For correspondence (gross and net)—
But with his writings you can toy,
In fact, he ain't seen nuthin' yet.

For Mayor LaGuardia

A happy new year, Rising Cloud,
With feathers, beads and pony;
May you shoot plenty of buffalo
And not so much baloney!

A year of joy and lots of fun,
With dedications humming;
And when some wild man swings a punch
May you first see it coming!

To a Drug Syndicate Stockholder.

This is my new year wish to you—
Also to many others:
A president with but one name—
And hardly any brothers!

For Jimmy Roosevelt

May 1939, my son.
Brings openings galore . . .
And may you have the strength to stand
At least a few jobs more.
May Hollywood do well by you,
And may you not forget
They haven't yet decided on A man for Butler (Rhett)!

For Any European Dictator

May happy days in '39
For you be found in store;
They won't, for if you won the world,
You'd still want something more!

What! Without the Babe?

The Yankees will broadcast their ball games next season for the first time. Possibly it will be called the "After the Ball is Over" program.

A sponsor for the broadcast is sought. We suggest a sock manufacturer.

Books And Things

Paul Bunyan Again

OUT SEATTLE-WAY, where the trees grow fabulously tall and the stories taller, James Stevens, biographer of Paul Bunyan in "Brawnyman," "Paul Bunyan," "Homer in the Sagebrush" and other books—found out how Christmas trees came to be. And this is James Stevens' discovery, and his Christmas greeting:

"In the time of Paul Bunyan and Babe the Blue Ox trees were here today and gone tomorrow. In that fact lies the invention of logging. In it, indeed, lies the invention of the whole lumber industry.

"And when I say 'lies.' I mean just that. Read on and you shall see.

"Paul Bunyan, as you ought to know if you don't, was such a mighty hunk of a man that his cast-off suspender buttons were used for wagon wheels.

"In the winter of the Blue Snow when Paul first came to real manhood, America was a different country from the land we know today. There were mountains that stood on their heads, rivers that ran uphill, and the weather was so wild and unregulated that it was common for two seasons to come at once. In fact, one Christmas all four seasons came on together; before the day was done many inhabitants were suffering from frostbite, sunstroke, spring fever, and fall rheumatism at one and the same time. But the greatest difference of all was in the timber.

"There was no standing timber. The trees of that time pulled up roots and trotted off when the spirit moved them, or migrated in great groves from North to South in the winter and from South to North in the spring. Trees ruled the land until Paul Bunyan appeared.

"At first Paul was a farmer, or thought he was. All the first men sent over by Pete the First, King of Europe, were farmhands. But Paul and his farmhands soon found it impossible to cultivate the land and grow crops. A field might be plowed up one week, sown with wheat or planted with potatoes the next, and the third week, lo and behold, a grove of trees would move in. These were usually older trees which had gotten corns and bunions on their roots from years of traveling about the country. Naturally, the soft soil of cultivated fields had a special appeal to them. As the word got around among more and more groves of traveling trees, more and more of them moved in on Paul Bunyan's farms to take root and settle down and pass the rest of their days in comfort and ease.

"So at first trees were just a plague to Paul Bunyan. All one year he schemed and figured on ways to get rid of them.

"AT THAT TIME it was believed that when a body got the measles, the only way to cure them was to shave off the spots. That was how the razor came to be invented, simply to shave off measles spots. So when the measles broke out among his farmhands, Paul Bunyan sent over to the King of Europe for a special measles razor. When he got it, naturally, all whiskers of his patients were shaved off to boot, along with the spots of measles.

"'By the jowls of Jehosaphat!' roared Paul Bunyan, 'if whiskers can be shaved off a man's face, why can't trees that have taken root to stay in the fields be shaved off likewise? It's just a difference in size; it's the same proposition when you get to the bottom of it. I'm a-goin' to try it out!'

"No sooner said than done. The first trees ever chopped down on the American continent were felled with Paul Bunyan's measles razors. From then on developments came thick and fast. Paul soon saw that the razor was no implement for timber felling, so he invented the ax and then the crosscut saw. He changed his farmhands into loggers, and Babe from a plow ox into a skidding ox. He invented the term 'standing timber' for the trees which had taken root to stay in his farm lands.

"Here's were Christmas trees come in.

"In a few years Paul Bunyan had all the grown-up trees of the country tamed so that they would take root and stay in one place until they were logged. But the young trees were harder to change. As soon as they were weaned, they'd go frisking off, like pups, and they gave Paul Bunyan plenty of trouble.

"'This here just can't go on,' Paul Bunyan declared at last. 'I got to teach trees to stay put before they are old enough to make so much trouble.'

"'LIT UP LIKE a Christmas tree!' said Paul Bunyan, looking at this work with pride. 'That's what we'll call 'em from now on—every young fir, spruce or pine tree that gets itself lit and prettied up the week before Christmas will be called a Christmas tree, by the donkeys of the Three Wise Men!'

"No more was said. It seemed a kind of miracle. Every young tree was standing there, in its ribbons and bells, candles and stars, as though it had grown from the floor. And each was more beautiful somehow to all beholders than any tree with flowers and fruit or with fiery autumn leaves.

"So it has been ever since. To men, women and children, no kind of tree is more beautiful than a young fir, spruce or pine, all lit and prettied up with ribbons and bells, candles and stars, on Christmas Eve."

. . . It's still true in the week after Christmas.

Two Sore Spots

By Ernest K. Lindley

Equalizing The Labor Act

SINCE THE November election, the New Dealers have agreed with their sternest critics in identifying the Works Progress Administration and the National Labor Relations Board as the two sorest spots in the Administration.

LINDLEY

The President's prescription for sore spot No. 1 (WPA) is now known, in the main. Three of the key people, Harry L. Hopkins, Aubrey Williams and Mrs. Ellen Woodward, have been transferred to other posts, and the whole organization has been turned over to an Army engineer with a distinguished record, Col. F. C. Harrington. The Administration will not oppose amendment of the corrupt practices act to insulate WPA from politics. Another layer of insulation is being provided by bringing WPA under civil service. The Administration's discretionary power to allocate WPA funds will be curtailed, in all probability, by some kind of formula written into law.

For sore spot No. 2, the National Labor Relations Board and the act, the prescription will not be easy to work out. The two main lines of complaint issue from sources whose real interests are far apart: employers and the American Federation of Labor.

THE COMPLAINT from the employer side is generally that the act and its administration are lopsided. The law is lopsided, and Congress intended that it should be. It was passed to protect a right and to promote a practice. The right which it seeks to protect is that of workers to organize, and the practice which it seeks to promote is genuine collective bargaining.

A good case can be made for the establishment of collective bargaining as the general practice. The experience of Great Britain, Sweden and other democratic capitalist countries indicates that collective bargaining is the road to peaceful and stable industrial relations, that it remedies many conditions which otherwise the Government itself would be called upon to remedy. Voluntary agreements between employers and employes are the alternative to a greater degree of regimentation by the state.

Both the Labor Board and the act would be less vulnerable to criticism, I think, if they put more stress on the protection of a right and less on the promotion of a practice. In principle, the worker should be free to decide for himself whether he wishes to exercise his right to join his fellow workers in choosing representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining. Actually, the labor act and board recognize that he should have the freedom not to join a union as well as to join one. But the belief that the freedom to stay out of a union is inadequately protected is responsible for much of the support of one kind of proposed amendment to the NLRA. This is the kind of amendment which would protect a worker against "coercion from any source."

THAT ISSUE was threshed out in committee hearings and on the floor of the Senate before the NLRA was passed. It was decided that the Federal Government should confine itself to protecting the worker against certain specified types of coercion by the employer. The power of the boss to hire, fire and to demote or promote is, in both practice and theory, the main source of coercion of workers. Excepting violence or threat of violence, nothing that a union could resort to in an organizing drive could compare to the employer's power to coerce his workers.

To protect the worker against violence or the threat of violence there is an abundance of State and municipal law.

If the National Labor Relations Board were called upon to protect workers against intimidation by their fellows, violence and the threat of violence in industrial strife would have first to be made Federal crimes. Then the board would have to maintain an enormous police force throughout the country with the authority to displace State and local police whenever there is industrial strife.

THE EXTENSION of Federal authority would be enormous.

Another proposal to "equalize" the act would give the employer the right to petition the NLRB to hold an election among his employes. The NLRB could grant that right, under the present law, by amending its rules. For denying the employer that right up to now, however, the Labor Board has had a good practical reason. It wished to prevent an employer from heading off a union drive by petitioning for an election when union organizers made their first appearance at his plant. To sift such cases from those in which an employer is truly perplexed would impose a great burden on the Labor Board. In practice, the perplexed employer can nearly always get a decision by refusing to bargain until the Labor Board has determined who really represents his employes. Moreover, once a representation case has been begun by one or more unions, the NLRB makes the employer a party to it; whereas the railway labor act, commonly regarded as the model for successful labor disputes legislation, expressly prohibits the employer from being a party to a representation case.

Nevertheless, by a simple amendment to its rules, the NLRB would remove one cause of complaint. The experiment would be worth while, if for no other reason than to show whether this cause of complaint is genuine or whether, like the proposal to forbid "coercion from any source," this change would create more problems than it could solve.

A Youthful Actress Is Guilty of Thievery!

Virginia Weidler Purloins Mickey's Film; Mr. Coburn Signs Cornelia Otis Skinner; Brief Jottings of the Theater

THERE is an artful young scene-stealer in "Out West With the Hardys" who will come dangerously near running away with the picture, when it is presented for the first time on a Washington screen as chief feature of the New Year's bill, beginning Friday at Loew's Capitol Theater.

BELL

To be sure, nobody steals any scenes from the veteran Lewis S. Stone, perenially cast in the role of Judge Hardy in this series of homely, domestic comedies, but all the other members of the cast might understandably bring charges of grand larceny against this diminutive player, whose identity is completely disguised upon her first entrance. Yes, it is a "her." And a very young "her," at that, although her capabilities have become increasingly apparent to close observers of the cinema these many months past.

The character name is "Jake." The origin of this nomenclature is about as far-fetched as anything that has happened recently in the films, but this prodigious young actress manages even to live that down as the development of the Hardy fable progresses.

As I say, this conspicuously competent and completely juvenile actress steals no scenes from Mr. Stone, but she does cast the overinflated Master Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford and all of the lesser members of the cast into the comparative obscurity of her own shadow. The kid accomplishes this feat by limiting her activities to no single groove. She is as potent in the comic intervals of her performance as in the heart-broken periods attendant upon Master Rooney's seeming destruction of her favorite pony in a moment of overstuffed bravado.

The name of this sagacious young woman is Virginia Weidler. In the failing eyes of this column, Miss Weidler is the star of "Out West With the Hardys." There are, perhaps, obvious reasons why we are so impressed with the precocious Weidler talents as they were revealed at yesterday's preview of the incoming Capitol attraction.

Not a Member of the "Charm School"

To begin with, Virginia faces the cameras with two strikes on her by all conventional yardsticks of appraisal of youthful "charm." She is neither pretty nor endowed with those qualities of plaintiveness that mark the stock in trade of so many of the screen's favored youngsters. She is a plain, pig-tailed little lady, whose career probably never will encounter the word "glamour." But she has what it takes. Standing toe-to-toe with Master Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Cecilia Parker and the rest in "Out West With the Hardys," Miss Weidler slugs it out on an even footing and ends the bout with her hand held high as "the winnah." Wait 'til you see her in this one.

It should not be gathered from all this, of course, that Virginia Weidler is all there is to "Out West With the Hardys." Mr. Stone's performance is another fine example of how fathers should comport themselves, both on and off the screen, and Fay Holden, as the patient and understanding Mrs. Hardy, adds another fine portraiture to the growing gallery she is collecting as a result of the popularity of this series of distinctive American comedy-dramas. Cecilia Parker, as already intimated, continues as the impulsive and romantic Marian Hardy and Ann Rutherford once more gets Andy in the end. Ralph Morgan, Gordon Jones, Nana Bryant, Sara Haden and Don Castle are among the others who have much to do with the deep-seated appeal this latest of the Hardy adventures will exert over audiences.

Just where you will rank "Out West With the Hardys" among all its predecessors, needless to say, is a matter that is contingent wholly upon personal taste as regards the items of subject matter and locale.

Quite obviously the rigors of the Christmas week-end must have levied a heavy toll upon the energies of the Capital's drama desks. Only two were represented at yesterday's screening, presided over by Howard Burkhardt, manager of Loew's Capitol. The others—barring my esteemed confrere Judge Andrew Kelley, who Christmassed in the more desirable of Broadway's aisle seats—will be sorry when Friday rolls around and they are still sleepy!

Headliners for Thirteenth Street

To match a pretentious list of featured screen attractions, already set forth in this space, the Earle Theater has booked an equally impressive group of stellar personalities to headline its stage revues during immediately impending weeks.

Among those who will star in Production Manager Harry Anger's forthcoming musical tabloids will be Bob Crosby, brother of the more celebrated Bing, with his popular "Bob Cats Band." Featured with this organization will be Marion Mann, "sweet singer of swing," and the All-American Swing Four—Ray Bauduc, Bob Zurke, Eddie Miller and Bob Haggart. Close on their heels will come Lionel Stander, the gravel-voiced character comedian of the films. Mr. Stander, who has a set of steel rasps for vocal cords, will present a comedy skit patterned after the best of his work before the cameras and microphones.

Russ Morgan, famous for his "music in the Morgan manner," will be another early presentation in the top-line spot. The Morgan radio and recording orchestra has been heard over all of the Nation's principal networks on many sponsored hours.

In the meantime, plans are going forward nicely for the staging of "Gentlemen, Be Seated." Harry Anger's resurrection of American minstrelsy—a type of entertainment long missing from Washington's amusement scene. New York now is being scoured for singers, end-men, interlocutors and olio specialists to make this innovation one of the most notable in the Earle's history.

A new Jewish film, "The Cantor's Son," with the famous singer, Moishe Oysher, in the stellar role, will be shown on New Year's Day, which is by way of being next Sunday, on the screen at the Rialto Theater, for the one day only. The supporting cast will include Florence Weiss, Michael Rosenberg, Judah Bleich and other members of the New York Art Theater. Although produced in this country, "The Cantor's Son" is played in the Jewish tongue, with explanatory English subtitles.

Garbo's First "Talkie" to Be Revived

On Wednesday night, January 4, at 8:30 o'clock in Pierce Hall, "Anna Christie," one of the most important of the early talking pictures, will be presented by the Film Society of Washington as the third picture of its present season.

Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in 1930, "Anna Christie," adapted to the screen from the Eugene O'Neill stage play, had Greta Garbo in the title role; the late Marie Dressler, as Marthy Owen; George Marion, as Chris, and Charles Bickford, as Mat Burke. This will be rememberd by seasoned picturegoers as Garbo's first talking film.

Tickets for the showing a week from tonight are available only through the office of the Film Society. None will be on sale at the door.

From far away on the West Coast, that distinguished stentor of the theater, Beauvais Fox, announces far in advance, on behalf of the Mohawk Drama Fastival, that Charles Coburn, director of the festival held every summer at Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., has signed Cornelia Otis Skinner to star in Edward Sheldon's play of "Romance" next summer. Miss Skinner's appearance at the Festival will mark a renewal of relationship. She received her first professional engagement from Mr. and Mrs. Coburn when she made her debut as a diseuse.

Hope you have luck trying to exchange all those duplicate Christmas gifts!

Maybe It's Gracie's Hat That's So Funny!

ROBERT YOUNG, ELEANOR POWELL, GRACIE ALLEN, GEORGE BURNS as they enjoy a little raillery over the rail in "Honolulu," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer musical, soon to be seen on the country's screens. There should be two of Mr. Young in the picture above since he appears in a dual role in the film

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 27.—The great day is over for another year. But let's try to keep the sound of those Christmas carols ringing in our hearts—"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men." Hollywood did itself proud this year in trying to help those less fortunate instead of buying expensive gifts for each other. Now, all we have to do is to pay for our generosity, and keep the glow that went with it.

HEDDA HOPPER

I've seen all kinds of funny happenings but the silliest was watching Santa Claus get a traffic ticket. That sight tangled traffic for three blocks—even stars were able to go through mobs of shoppers without being asked for autographs.

The Bill Goetzes took pity on Claudette Colbert by giving her an anniversary party Christmas Eve. Last year Claudette and Dr. Pressman wrapped packages until 1 o'clock Christmas morning, then took time out to cook their own supper. Claudette said she never realized what a goop she'd been, choosing the day before Christmas to get married.

And for the first time Claudette let it be known she was jealous—and how—of another player who stole most of the scenes in the breakfast sequence in "Midnight"—he was her own French poodle, Smokey. Once he butted her right out of the scene to get the close-up for himself, which gave the company hysterics.

Don Ameche celebrated Christmas with his entire family, seven in all, with the exception of one married sister who lives in the Middle West. Yesterday was just another coffee klutch to Don—you know he took that weekly heckling from McCarthy. Donald Dixon will bear the brunt of Charlie's sarcasm instead of Nelson Eddy, who's about to leave on another concert tour.

A step in the right direction: Bob Leonard, the most beloved man on the MGM lot, is both producer and director on "Broadway Serenade," which is the first time that's ever happened on that lot. Bob brought the top sequence set used in the picture and transplanted it to the Children's Hospital together with ten trimmed Christmas trees. The nurses are now looking for a saint's name that will go with Leonard.

Maybe that's what it will turn out to be, when Sam Goldwyn announced that he's signed up a young gas station attendant and lured him from his pumps into the glare of the studio spotlight. The boy's name is Dana Andrews, and he's doing right well in the "Boy David" at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. But I don't believe he'll be taking David Niven's place in "Raffles."

We who love David and glory in his success in "Dawn Patrol" resent the fact that he's been called uppety. He's fast becoming one of our most important players and he's hoping Sam won't take up that option. Any other studio would pay him ten times what he's been getting. I understand up until a short time ago his weekly stipend was $350. David's known as the star-saver, he's been a friend in need more than once. Or doesn't Sam remember!

Wonder why so many of our stars are antagonistic to studio still pictures when those pictures are carefully retouched, and players are safeguarded in every way? Yet at private parties they'll preen themselves before anybody's camera.

Walter Wanger proved again that he's one of our best little discoverers, when he cast Ann Sothern in the comedy part in "Trade Winds." Freddie March and Joan Bennett couldn't quite overcome her handicap, though Joan's black wig gave her more animation. It's a very entertaining picture and one of the few I've seen where they successfully wrote a story around a bunch of backgrounds.

"Pacific Liner" gave Vic McLaglen another chance to play one of those rip-snorting, hard-driving brutes who sweep all before him. You can't help loving a guy who's willing to take as much punishment himself as he demands of others. It gave you the shivers seeing the life below stairs on an ocean liner, which you never think about when you're coddled in luxury, laughs and steamer rugs—reading the latest novel on the upper deck. Chester Morris and Wendy Barrie give fine performances.

Star Will Drop Supplies From Air

Faced with the prospect of his Idaho ranch being snowed in from December to May, Wallace Beery recently prepared for emergencies by placing an order for miniature parachute by which provisions can be dropped on his landing field.

For the past three years Beery has had his stock moved from the ranch to Big Creek, a three-day pack, with the coming of winter. Any help remaining at the ranch has had to lay in sufficient supplies to carry throaugh until spring, and often items have been forgotten.

Since Beery plans to rebuild the property next year, he wants to be able to fly in equipment and any extra provisions that may be needed.

Myrna's Own Dog Becomes Actor

Myrna Loy's wire-hair terrier, Spike, will play the famous role of Asta in "Return of the Thin Man."

Spike, whose brother was featured in a national contest conducted by Mark Hellinger, is being trained for the part and will be ready to go before the camera in two months, when William Powell and Miss Loy resume their popular roles in the "Thin Man" series.

The original Asta later became Mr. Smith in "The Awful Truth," but the name Asta belongs to Metro-Goldwin-Mayer. Spike's ability to learn tricks gave Miss Loy the idea of giving him a chance to play the Asta part, and Spike is making rapid progress.

Correspondent Spurns Idea of Employing Common Sense, Instead of Turning Invariably to Psychiatry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a hard time figuring you out. In a way, you remind me of David Seabury, the prolific writer on life adjustment subjects. Up to a certain point, you both seem to know something about the human psyche (a good deal, I should have said) and then all of a sudden you go blooey. The letter signed "M. E.," published December 22, supplies an instance of what I mean.

You gave her some mighty sound stuff, and then suddenly you got indignant at the idea of humanity turning to science for help instead of using its "natural endowment of plain common sense." I wonder what you think "common sense" is. Don't you realize that it isn't the same thing in any two persons; that it is made up mostly of those opinions of other people that happen to have become a part of the individual's habitual thinking? That it follows patterns dictated by fears, prejudices, superstitions, repressions, etc.? The woman who wrote that letter obviously has tried to use her common sense already, and finds herself going in circles.

You've obviously had some training in the field of psychic phenomena—I should guess as a patient. I should also guess that this experience was with a psychiatrist of the "sound body makes a sound mind" school, which may account for your going off on a tangent at a critical point. Have you ever heard about how human conduct and conscious thinking is influenced by subconscious mental tendencies? How such conduct and thinking is influenced by the conflicts that arise when instinctive tendencies meet up with the necessity for adjustment to the realities of life? Have you considered how "common sense" can be applied to a mental tendency that the individual may be unconscious of?

Prof. N. Schaler (he was a geologist, I believe) writes in The Neighbor, that "it is hardly too much to say that all the important errors of conduct, all the burdens of men or of societies are caused by the inadequacies in the association of primal animal emotions with those mental powers which have been so rapidly developed in mankind." If you want a picture of how imperfect and weak those mental powers are in the realm of man's personal adjustment to life, read Robinson's "The Mind in the Making," and also O'Higgins' "Secret Springs." Also, McDougall's "Social Psychology."

"M. E." says that after "seven years of married life, apparently more than ordinarily happy," she is obsessed with the idea that she is not "measuring up." Measuring up to what? To some arbitrary standard of how a good wife should FEEL; some standard she unconsciously absorbed from the social code she was exposed to, which became a part of her conscience, ideal of self, super-ego (or whatever you wish to call it). Why shouldn't she be told that she is not responsible for how she feels; that she cannot control how she feels? The way she feels is a FACT, not something she can cut to a pattern, or stamp out, as her accidentally acquired ideals and principles happen to take a notion.

No doubt she reproaches herself for being glad when her husband goes away on a trip. She OUGHT NOT to feel this way, she thinks. Why not? How can there be anything but conflict and suffering and anxiety for her when she tells herself that a FACT (the way she feels) ought not to be a fact. She's after happiness, I take it, and free admission of, and (so far as is practicable) action in accordance with, her instinctive state of feeling, is the thing that's going to give her happiness—if her conscience doesn't make her suffer.

If she doesn't really care for her husband, how is she going to act on your advice to "do something constructive about it?" She's going to interpret this as meaning that she should correct the situation by "feeling" differently toward him. And then will follow a struggle between her conscious effort to behave toward her husband in a fashion which "common sense" dictates, and an instinctual tendency to the contrary that she seems to be fairly well aware of. Why not admit to herself that her husband has ceased to interest her? Admitting this (if it happens to be true) let her act any way she wants, to get the best she can from the situation, being as fair to him as she feels she can be. Well, enough of this. I don't suppose you could publish it, even if you believed it (as I hope you do), because all the churches and respectable people would be on your neck. GRUMPY.

Common Sense Defined

DEAR GRUMPY: In my opinion, your foregoing (and rather meandering) dissertation is compounded of equal parts tommyrot and dissociated scientific borrowings. However, I have no objections to publishing it, if only to disapprove your wholly erroneous supposition that I write with an uneasy eye on "the churches and respectable people." Since limitations of space make it impossible for me to undertake a rebuttal of equal length, I shall confine myself to a few remarks. To begin with: Whatever knowledge of "psychic phenomena" I may possess has been acquired through reading, study and observation, and NOT as a patient—unless, of course, I may be considered a self-treated patient. Next: I should be more inclined to believe in the "sound mind makes a sound body" school, than in the reverse which you impute to me.

Third: While Webster's dictionary succinctly defines "common sense" as meaning "sound ordinary sense; good judgment." I should be inclined to amplify to the extent of saying it had reference to the sum total of the individual's practicable social knowledge, acquired via the medium of sensory and extra-sensory perception—which means, of course, through experience of a psychic and social kind, adequately digested. We might say that common sense is the cumulative product of impulse translated into action which results in the crude material of experience; which of itself holds little value unless it is assayed (i. e., reflectively examined and analyzed) for the purpose of learning what of profit or loss it brought to the individual.

Fourth: In myp opinion, the person whose life pattern is "dictated by fears, prejudices, supersitions, repressions, etc.," whose "habitual thinking is mostly made up of those opinions of other people" that he has "happened" to contact and subscribe to, is a person who possesses little common sense and who is making no effort to acquire more. Either he has been denied, or is failing to utilize, those intrinsic human qualities of resourcefulness, intelligence and adaptability to environment, so necessary for begetting it. So if you and I have little in common in our respective philosophies of conduct, it may be we split on the rock of our respective interpretations of the meaning of "common sense."

'Softie' Dress for Young Matrons

The youthful matron this winter will be wearing less black and more of the light hearted pastels usually associated with her sub-deb sisters. Typical of the soft tea-time frock, adaptable to modern matrons is the rayon crepe above in high tones of raspberry, pink or subtle shades of blue and green. Its tucked, stitched skirt goes equally well under fur coats now or for Southern resort wear later

HE—Well of all things!

SHE—What's the matter?

HE—Here's a picture of a woman kissing a policeman because he saved her dog from being run over. Look at that! Right out in public!

SHE—Well, I think it's better for her to kiss him in public than in private—

HE—That's not the point. Why did she have to make a fool of herself? I tell you women are getting crazier every day about publicity.

SHE—Well not all of them—

HE—Oh I know you always try to defend 'em, but you might as well face facts . . . say here's an interesting notation: "TWENTY TIMES AS MUCH SPENT FOR LIPSTICK AS FOR CASTOR OIL."

SHE—Well what of it?

HE—What of it? Is it any wonder the country's bankrupt? Now that's one of the things I keep telling you is the matter with the American people. No wonder Hitler and Mussolini havn't got any respect for us.

SHE—Well, I've only had one lipstick—

HE—I wasn't saying anything about you. You always take everything so personal . . . Say, if here isn't another debutante's picture! "GLAMOUR GIRL DRIVES MILK WAGON." See what I told you! Publicity! They'll do anything for publicity.

SHE—Well but after all—

HE—It's no use to get excited. You might as well face facts . . . Say this is interesting! "MAN OF 91 FATHER OF TRIPLETS" . . . Wait! Here see his picture. See what is says, "Jeremiah Stepp and his 19-year-old bride of a year." Now he's a pretty spry looking old man—"

SHE—The wife looks sort of feeble minded.

HE—Oh, I don't know. You can't tell much by a snapshot that way . . . Wait a minute. What's this? . . . Say this is interesting! "NO WOMAN GENIUS, SAYS SAVANT." Now that's just what I've always said—

SHE—Well I don't pretend to be a genius.

HE—There you go! Taking everything to yourself! Nobody ever said you were a genius.

SHE—Well I know I've got as much brains as lots of women—

HE—That's not the point. This man says just what I've told you all along. If women would just be themselves—

SHE—Well it's all right with me—

HE—Well there's no use to get mad about it . . . well if this doesn't beat all!

SHE—What's the matter now?

HE—It says here women's skirts are going an inch higher!

SHE—Oh, well, maybe it's not true.

HE—Here it is right in the paper! See what I told you—

SHE—Say let me see the paper a minute . . . Well of all things! Say this is good! "MAN ROBBED OF $1,000, SEEKS GIRL NAMED GWEN."

HE—Oh well, there's always some old fools around.

SHE—Say this is good too! "MILLIONAIRE PLAYBOY PAYS $100,000 TO SIXTH WIFE."

SHE—Ha! Ha! Ha! Say this is good! Ha! Ha! Ha!

HE—What's so funny?

SHE—Ha! Ha! Ha! "CHORUS GIRL DIVORCES ELDERLY SPOUSE."

HE—Well what of it?

SHE—Ha! Ha! Ha! Wait a minute . . . "SAYS 48-YEAR-OLD HUSBAND WAS TOO SLOW."

HE—Well of all the—say what'll they think of to put in the papers next? It's getting so you can't believe a word you see!

Dowager Hump Is Noticeable With Upswept Hair Styles

Adds Years to Looks of Old and Young May Be Easily Ironed Out by Exercises Care Should Be Taken in Type Practice

By Ida Jean Kain.

WITH upswept hair and a chic little hat, it is impossible to be oblivious to a dowager's hump. It sits brazenly on the tiptop vertebra and does you the ill turn of adding years to your looks. You don't have to put up with it! That bump can be ironed away, leaving in its place a nice, smooth young line.

As you've guessed, the treatment is exercise, but be chary of the kind you choose. Exercise which incline the head and neck forward are to be avoided, for they aggravate a double chin. Since the only way you can dislodge this unwelsome fat pad is by working the muscles at the nape of the neck and between the shoulders, you must be on guard against an unconscious tendency to let the head go forward even while doing the correct exercises.

Exercises Described

Here is a set that will banish a dowager's hump, provided you also cultivate the habit of holding your head squarely on your shoulders, neck stretched tall, chin level, so that a perfect right angle is formed at the juncture of chin and throat.

1. Hold a towel taut by the ends behind the head, and push hard against it with the back of the head. Repeat six times, and rest.

2. Standing, fold the arms behind the back and just below the shoulder blades. Try to shorten the distance between the head and the arms by lowering the head hackward and forcibly contracting the back muscles. Always relax the muscles very gradually after performing an exercise. Repeat this one six times,

3. Stand erect in good posture and turn the head slowly to touch the point of the chin to the shoulder tip. Very deliberately lower the head backward—don't let it drop back—and circle slowly around to touch the point of the chin to the other shoulder tip. Gradually relax the throat and neck muscles.

Contracting, Relaxing

4. Lie flat on the floor, face down and arms down at the sides. Contract the back muscles to raise the head and shoulders 3 inches or so off the floor. Relax, rest and repeat six times.

5. Stand erect but with shoulders relaxed, arms hanging heavily from the shoulders and down at the sides. Begin with the muscles around the hairline at the nape of the neck and contract them, slowly bringing more of the back muscles into the action, until shoulders are hunched up around the ears. Then draw the shoulder blades together, using the muscles between the shoulder blades rather than pushing the shoulder tips back. With the shoulder blades held tightly together, slowly draw them down, concentrationg the muscular action along the upper part of the spinal column. Then gradually let all the tension go out of the shoulder girdle. In doing this exercise it is extremely important to counteract a tendency to let the head go forward, and to keep the arms and shoulder tips out of the movement.

These exercises will give you a lovely, young neckline. Clip and save them.

Add one medium (17-ounce) can of cooked macaroni in cream sauce. Add desired amount of small pieces of mild American cheese, which has been broken with a fork. Add one egg and mix thoroughly. Fill well greased muffin tins full of the mixture. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 45 minutes. Turn out on hot platter, garnish with parsley, pickles and chutney if desired.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 27.

AS WE all know, there is a lot of farce about the debut racket as it is run in this town. The combination of pretty, camera-conscious kids and ambitious mammas and alert tub-thumpers produces a very comical picture of this "presenting a daughter to society" during a New York season. That is, it is comical when it isn't even more sickening in some of its aspects.

ALICE HUGHES

Last week a group of the town wits and smart boys proceeded to reduce the whole deboo business to its ultimate absurdity by staging an ultra-formal debut for Miss Wilma Baard, an ash blonde who is one of the loveliest professional models in town. Wilma took it all in the spirit of fun and good publicity—as did the lissom laddies who thought up the gag. Miss Baard was born just over the river in Hoboken, N. J., and passed her pre-school years on the railroad barge of which her revered pater was skipper.

I must say this gang of young men about the bistros did a great ribbing job. Among the better known of the crowd were Peter Arno, the cartoonist; Luscious Lucius Beebe, the newspaperman, and McClelland Barclay, the artist. They staged Miss Wilma's debut at the old Firehouse, where burlesqued melodramas are put on. It was devastatingly formal. White ties and claw-hammer coats were the rule for the men, and the ladies wore their best party dresses. There was a long receiving line, and the usual mob of "stags" for dancing. Corks popped in all directions. And so the lovely Wilma Baard was formally "presented to society" by the smart boys in the highest style. It was as nifty as a deboo as the town has seen. The next morning Wilma's alarm clock rang at 7, and she was off to pose for a tooth-paste ad. That's a debutante for my money!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Did you read about the two Cinderellas who found the lady's $15,000 diamond ring in the big store where they work, and split a $500 reward? Beatrice Robbins and Mildred Geiss were about the perkiest gals in town over the holiday. Beatrice was going to take a Bermuda trip, and Milly wanted a new fur coat. And because they found a silly bauble belonging to one of the wealthy Kresge family—the girls got them! Heart-warming, a happening like that!

The costliest night-spot in town, considering its size, is now daring fate at Delmonico's. It's called "The Road to Mandalay," and its three lavish rooms cost a fabulous sum to decorate and outfit. Its presiding genius is the singing Harry Richman, who lately married Hazel Forbes, the blonde show girl who fell heiress to a huge wad of money. Richman and "Addie" Moffett lead the entertainers. With the night-club business here not so forte—except this week—Harry's taking a chance. But shucks, you know Richman! He flew the ocean with Dick Merrill and a cargo of ping-pong balls.

Incidentally, at its opening was the former Mary Duncan, one of the loveliest girls of stage and screen. Now, of course, she's Mrs. Laddie Sanford, of the carpet fortune. He plays polo, and Mary looks beautiful. Nice work and they can get it.

Mammoth White House Ball Is Brilliant Backdrop For Coming Out Party of Mrs. Roosevelt's Niece

Gowned in White Organdy, First Lady's Namesake Is Center of Youth-Dominated Crowd Who Danced to Eleanor Glide and Virginia Reel

chiffon built on white taffeta with an elaborate garniture of tiny rosebuds on the skirt and bodice." Miss Ethel Roosevelt was presented in an empire frock of white satin made with a low bodice and a crystal trimmed neckline.

The President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, while not in the receiving line, had a little reception of her own during most of the evening. Her frock of black satin was cut on simple lines, with a train. Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt, the President's sister-in-law, was another of the many members of the Roosevelt "clan" attending the party.

A huge Christmas tree in the east room, ablaze with lights, added a festive and seasonal note to the scene. Irving Conn and his orchestra from Ben Riley's Arrowhead Inn, New York, played for the dancing and featured virtually every step from the "Eleanor Glide" to Viennese waltzes and the Virginia reel.

At midnight there was a buffet supper featuring a typical White House ball menu of scrambled eggs, sausages, chicken salad, ice cream and cake. Guests served at a long table in the state dining room found seats for themselves at small tables set up there and in the blue, green and red rooms.

Many Dinners Precede Dance

Many dinners preceded the White House ball, in addition to the one given by President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Three Washington debutantes, Miss Ann Wilkinson, Miss Maisie Howard and Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, were feted at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, the latter of whom is the President's cousin. Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill entertained 30 dinner guests, including several Washington debs and members of younger sets from Boston and Chicago.

Mrs. Francis Sayre, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, had a few friends in for dinner in honor of Mrs. Sayre's daughter, Eleanor, and his sons, Woodrow Wilson and Francis Sayre, jr., who are home for the holidays. Guests at this event, who went on to the White House dance, were Miss Mary Dora Thompson, who wore a frock of silver and blue lame; Miss Selene Harmon, of Wellesley Hills., Mass., who was gowned in blue chiffon, made with a gold-trimmed bodice; Donald Straus, who is the guest of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; Andrew Donovan, George Schearer and Merritt Cootes.

Miss Redway Feted by Parkers

Miss Dora Mason Redway, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Redway, of Longmeadow, Mass., was feted at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker, sr. Mrs. Redway was formerly Miss Edith Parker. Guests at the dinner included the Misses Edith and Faith Moffat, the Misses Stephanie and Helen Edgell and Miss Anstis Dane, all of Boston. Young men in the company, all Harvard students, included Russell Peabody, William Edgar, jr., Charles Perkins, Richard Devins, John Hoar, jr., Stuart Rockwell and Edward Barnes.

All White House aids were on hand for the party and each squired a pretty girl from the younger set. By special request from the First Lady, they brought along young ladies who had not attended a ball at the White House before, and the ones in the group were among the most fortunate attending the party. Merrymaking for them began at an early hour when they were feted at a cocktail party given by Lieut. D. J. MacDonald, U. S. N., and then went on to a dinner on the President's yacht, the Potomac.

Officialdom Is Well Represented

Daughters and sons of officials, both in the Government and in service, made up a sizable section of last evening's party. Henry and Robert Morgenthau, sons of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., were there; also Miss Jean Wallace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; Miss Joan W. Redmond and Dr. William Sargant.

Roosevelt Clan Attends Dinner At White House

Eleven members of the far-flung Roosevelt clan were gathered around the dining room table of the White House last night when the President and First Lady entertained at a dinner before the dance which they gave for Mrs. Roosevelt's niece, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt. She is the daughter of Mrs. John Cutter, of Boston, and Hall Roosevelt, of New York.

Among the guests was Miss Sarah A. Derby, whose mother, Mrs. Richard Derby, the former Ethel Roosevelt, made her debut at the White House during the Christmas holidays of 1908. With her cousin, Quentin Roosevelt, another guest at the dinner, Miss Derby is staying with their aunt, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Mr. Roosevelt is a son of Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, Long Island.

Others at the dinner were Henry P. Roosevelt and Daniel S. Roosevelt, brothers of Miss Eleanor Roosevelt; Hall Roosevelt, her father; Henry P. Roosevelt, Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt, Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., Stewart J. O. Alsop and Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, jr.

Also present among the non-Roosevelt connections were Dr. Russell Fraser, Miss Anne Grant, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Henry and Robert Morgenthau, sons of the Secretary of the Treasury, an Mrs. Henry Morgenthau; Miss Jean Wallace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; Miss Joan W. Redmond and Dr. William Sargant.

lace, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who wore a bouffant frock of blue net, trimmed with a belt of darker blue sequins; Miss Lucile Sheppard, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who was a pretty picture in pink tulle with dubonnet accents; Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, who made her formal debut in Chicago, wearing the same frock as she had on last evening—a full-skirted model of ice blue tulle over a silver slip. Rose Chatfield-Taylor, her sub-deb sister, and Margaret Houghteling, sub-deb daughter of the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, were also glimpsed in the crowd.

Miss Elinor Gudger, debutante daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, was there, beautifully turned out in a frock of white tulle and silver. Other belles of the ball from Washington's debutante set were Miss Patricia Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, who appeared in a handsome frock of white and silver lame; Miss Maisie Howard, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, who was gowned in black velvet trimmed in pink, and Miss Ann Wilkinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Theodore S. Wilkinson.

Still others there from the debutante set were Miss Jacqueline Meredith, in a frock of white tulle and lace; Miss Mary Dora Thompson, whose gown of silver and blue lame was fashioned with a full skirt and a fitted bodice; Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Mary Manning, in petunia satin; Miss Barbara Henning in white net with crystal trimmings.

Many Are There From Other Cities

Out-of-towners here especially for the event included Miss Olivia Thorndike and her brother, Augustus Thorndike 3d, of Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Miss Rosamond Higgins, Miss Janet Reggie, Miss Nancy Nichols and Miss Margaret Bruch, of Brookline, Mass.; Miss Ann Godfrey, Miss Sally Reed, Philip Reed and Samuel L. Reed, of Boston.

Still others in the crowd were Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Norton Goodwin, Nathan Bartlett, Jacques Dumaine and Armand Berard, of the French Embassy staff; Canfield Himes, whose mother, Mrs. Joseph Himes, entertained at a dinner before the ball, and scores of others.

Mrs. E. H. Lewis Is Betrothed

Col. and Mrs. Theodore Hall, now of Columbus, Ohio, and formerly of Washington, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall Lewis, to Dr. Dilworth Lupton, minister of the First Unitarian Church in Cleveland.

The bride-elect attended Punahou Academy in Honolulu and George Washington University. She is a member of the Society of the Daughters of the United States Army and Kappa Delta Sorority. For several years she was a columnist on the Boston Evening Transcript and the Chautauqua Daily.

This winter Mrs. Lewis, accompanied by her 3-year-old daughter, Sallie, has been visiting her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hall, jr., of Cleveland. Mr. Hall has written for The Washington Post for the past five years.

Dr. Lupton, who has served as minister of his church in Cleveland for the past 20 years, was formerly at the First Unitarian Church in Louisville and during the World War was a chaplain in the Army. He is a graduate of the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale and of the Meadville Theological School. He has written many articles for religious magazines and is the author of the recently published book, "Religion Says You Can."

Charles Remey Entertains for Mary Manning

Miss Mary Adams Manning, daughter of Mrs. Harry K. Hickey and a debutante of the season, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Charles Mason Remey at his home on Massachusetts avenue.

Guests were Miss Elizabeth Meyers, Miss Elise Hill, Miss Harriet Hart, Miss Elinor Gudger, Miss Caroline Hart, Miss Houston Niller, Miss Mary Alice White, Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Ashby Proctor, Miss Patricia Morris, and Miss Mary Dora Thompson.

Miss Manning made her formal bow to society at a Thanksgiving tea given by her grandmother, Mrs. Beale R. Howard.

Debutante Party Given Miss Quirk

Add to the list of debutante parties given during the holidays the luncheon yesterday in honor of Miss Roberta Quirk. The event was given at the 1925 F Street Club by Mrs. G. H. Muckley and Mrs. M. J. Gormley.

Among other debutantes and members of the younger set who were present were Miss Barbara Henning, Miss Joan King, Miss Courtney Prettyman, Miss Mary Rust, Miss Dolly Sasser, Miss Margaret Cotter, Miss Claire Cotter, Miss Nancy Lee Masten, Miss Florence Cauthen, Miss Patricia Gormley and Miss Lalla Harrison.

Decorations were in red and white.

Lillian Nalle Becomes Bride Of Lieut. Tyson

Father Gives Her In Marriage; Reception Follows Ceremony

Of particular interest to Army and Navy Circles was the wedding yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock of Miss Lillian Nalle, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. William Nalle, of 3407 Quebec street, to Lieut. Robert Nabors Tyson, son of Mrs. Archibald Lowndes Tyson, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and the late Mr. Tyson. The ceremony took place in the Fort Myer chapel, the Rev. John S. Kromer officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a hoop-skirted, tight-waisted gown of ivory silk moire, with a long train and leg o' mutton sleeves. Her long illusion veil fell from a coronet cap of old family lace, and she carried a colonial bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Julie Camp Is Maid of Honor

Miss Julie Camp served as maid of honor and the bride's only attendant. She also wore a hoop-skirted frock in Parmesan violet silk moire. A tiny velvet hat in a wine colored shade completed her costume and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of red roses centered with violets.

James F. Alston, of Tuscaloosa, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Lieut. John Hutchinson, of Chanute Field, Ill.; Lieut. Gordon Austin, of Bolling Field; Lieut. Charles B. Hines, of Fort Myer, and Lieut. W. C. Freudenthal, of Bolling Field.

A reception at the Army-Navy Country Club followed the ceremony. The rooms were decorated with holly, Christmas greens and white roses and chrysanthemums. When she left for a trip to New Orleans, the bride was wearing a black fur coat and matching pillbox hat over a teal-blue silk dress. A single white orchid was pinned to her coat. The couple will reside at Fort Sill, Okla., where Lieut. Tyson is stationed.

Many Out-of-Town Guests Attend

The bride attended the National Cathedral School and the Corcoran Art School here. Lieut. Tyson prepared at the Virginia Military Institute for West Point, from which he was graduated in 1934.

Mrs. Tyson is a granddaughter of the late Gen. William Nalle, adjutant general of Virginia for many years, and of the late Bishop Mahlon Gilbert, of St. Paul, Minn.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were the bridegroom's mother; Mr. and Mrs. James F. Alson, of Tuscaloosa; Mr. and Mrs. J. Alexander Veech, of Lexington, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Barbour, of Montclair, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Carey Nalle, of Baltimore; Owen Nalle, of Charlottesville, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Campbell, of Fairmont, N. C.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Mrs. Cuyler Clark, Mrs. Robert W. Strong and Mrs. Thomas J. Camp.

Senator Tydings Moving to Capital This Week-End

Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings will close Oakington, their Maryland home, this week-end for the winter and will move to the Shoreham Hotel for the Congressional season.

Returning from Europe, where they visited Mrs. Tydings' father Joseph Davies, Ambassador to Belgium, and Mrs. Davies, they went directly to Oakington to celebrate Christmas. Over the holidays they have as their guests Mrs. Tydings' mother and sister, Mrs. Knight Davies, and Miss Emlen Davies.

Helen Pickens' Engagement To R. T. Albright Announced

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS HELEN PICKENS

Wedding Will Unite Families Prominent in American History

The engagement of Miss Helen Speed Pickens and Robert Taft Albright was announced yesterday at a tea which Mrs. E. M. Pickens, mother of the bride-to-be, gave at her apartment at the Shoreham Hotel. The wedding for which no date has as yet been set, will unite two families prominent in American history.

Miss Pickens' father was the late Dr. E. M. Pickens of the faculty of the University of Maryland and she is a descendant of Gen. Andrew Pickens, of Revolutionary fame. On her maternal side, the bride-elect is descended from the Rev. Dr. William Linn, who was chaplain of the Continental Congress and chaplain of the first House of Representatives.

Mr. Albright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles V. Albright, of Norfolk, is a direct descendant of Robert Taft, who came from England and established the Taft family in this country.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Holton Arms School and attended Duke University. She studied French at the Universitiere de Poitier at Tours, France. The prospective bridegroom is a senior at Duke University.

Miss Pickens, who stood in the receiving line at yesterday's party with her mother and her fiance, wore a gown of blue velvet and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Mrs. Pickens was in black and lame.

Those who assisted were Mrs. J. M. Holton, Mrs. Wirt Robinson, Mrs. M. O. Davis, Mrs. Leland W. Miller, Mrs. W. W. Lemmond and Miss Winifred Pickens, sister of the bride-elect

Belk-Hobart Wedding Event

The wedding of Dr. Irma Hazlett Belk, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Belk, of Henry, S. Dak., to Dr. Harold McComb Hobart, son of Clayton Hobart, of Gagetown, Mich., and the late Mrs. Hobart, took place at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the Church of the Epiphany. The Rev. Duncan Frazier performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by close friends and relatives.

Easter lilies, flanked by candelabra, banked the altar. The bride wore a traveling suit of grape-colored crepe, with a jacket embroidered in wool and a matching hat. A corsage of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley completed her costume.

Miss Blaine Hobart, sister of the bridegroom, served as maid of honor, wearing a teal blue crepe dress with a matching hat and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Dr. Arnold McNitt was best man. A breakfast at the Admiral Club followed the ceremony. After a honeymoon in New York, the couple will reside in Washington.

Miss Ethel Belk, the bride's sister, came from Oxford, Ohio, for the wedding. Dr. Frederick Helwig, of Allentown, Pa., was another out-of-town guest.

The bride, who was graduated from George Washington University School of Medicine in 1936, is now on the staff of St. Elizabeths Hospital. Dr. Hobart attended Alma College in Michigan, and was graduated in the same class from the George Washington School of Medicine. He is now chief resident physician at Childrens Hospital.

Miss Merrill Honors Miss Anne Underwood

Miss Anne Underwood was honored yesterday at a luncheon given at the Washington Club by Miss Florence Merrill.

The 24 guests included a number of the year's debutantes and other friends of the hostess and guest of honor.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

ONE OF THE biggest holiday parties in the hunt country will be the breakfast which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis will give today after the meet of the Middleburg Hounds. Many people are expected to come down from Washington. Mrs. Davis was formerly Miss Mildred Grebel, of Washington.

Miss Melita Seipp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Seipp, of Middleburg, was presented to Chicago society at a large party given there last evening by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Seipp. The Seipps, who left on Christmas night for Chicago, will return in time to attend the ball scheduled to take place tomorrow evening at the North Wales Club in honor of Miss Mildred McConnell. Mr. and Mrs. Robert McConnell will present their debutante daughter at this affair at which there will be between 500 and 600 guests.

HARRY O'HARA, of New York, is spending this week with his mother, Mrs. Dion Kerr; Frank Harrison, of Charles Town, is the guest of Mackenzie Tabb, and Charles Abbott, of Boston, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fred at their home in Middleburg.

Col. and Mrs. John Butler and their son, Jack Butler, who is home from St Paul's School, have been foxhunting at every meet during the holidays.

FOLLOWING the meet of the Piedmont Fox Hounds, Dr. Cary Langhorne entertained the field at a large hunt breakfast at his home.

Among those present were Baron and Baroness d'Epremesnil, Archibald C. Randolph, M. F. H. of the Piedmont Hunt, and Mrs. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Josh Fletcher, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cushman and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon.

ALSO Mr. and Mrs. William Langley, Senator and Mrs. Thomas Glasscock, Col. and Mrs. John Butler, Col. and Mrs. William Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Hall, Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Fletcher, Mrs. Raymond Belmont, Mrs. Amory Perkins, Miss Winnifred Maddux, Count Frederick Ledebur, Gordon Grayson, Robin Clark, Thomas Slater, Harris Bucklin. Still others present were Dr. Langhorne's sister, Mrs. Nancy Clayton, and Mr. and Mrs. William Beverly Mason.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, recently returned from Hollywood, met with Piedmont Hounds at Upperville on Saturday.

Julie Cahill Bows to Society Here at Tea

Worthington and Cotter Sisters Among Her Friends There

In a Christmas setting of poinsettias and ferns, Miss Julie Hillary Cahill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James A. Cahill, jr., was presented to Capital society yesterday at a tea at her parents' home on Foxhall road.

The debutante wore an imported gown of French brocade, white shot with silver threads. The frock was made with a fitted bodice and hoop skirt, and she carried a colonial bouquet of violets and other flowers in pastel shades.

Her mother, who received before the fireplace in the drawing room with her daughter, was attired in a floor-length gown of electric blue crepe with crystal bead trimming across the shoulders and the length of the sleeves. A corsage of pale lavender orchids and lilies of the valley completed her costume.

Bevy of Debs Assist Miss Cahill

Mrs. Raymond H. McKinney, sister-in-law of the hostess, had come from her home in Rye, N. Y., with her daughter, Miss Barbara McKinney, to assist at the party. Others pouring tea were Mrs. Robert F. Cahill, aunt of the debutante; Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Joseph J. Mundell, Mrs. James Kilroy, Mrs. Casimir Leidell, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. Jerome F. Crowley and Mrs. Joseph J. Cotter.

Assisting the debutante were a group of her young friends, among them the Misses Mimi and Julia Worthington, Claire and Margaret Cotter, Nancy Hoskinson, Betty Fischer, Elizabeth Langlais, Betty Lloyd Hutchison and Catherine Tilghman.

The tea table was centered with a bowl of Easter lilies and white snapdragons, flanked by tall white tapers.

Buffet Supper Climaxes Event

Following the afternoon's festivities, the young people were feted at a buffet supper given by Dr. and Mrs. Cahill for their daughter and those assisting her. Later the party went on to the Spinsters' Ball at the auditorium in Leesburg, Va.

Miss Cahill is being feted at a number of parties. Her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Cahill, will give a tea for her January 3 at their home in Spring Valley; Mrs. Walter Distler will be hostess at a luncheon for her next month, though the exact date has not been set, and she will share honors with the Misses Cotter at a luncheon to be held by Miss Mary Catherine Mundell January 9 at the Chevy Chase Club.

Dr. and Mrs. Cahill moved into their attractive home only a month or so ago. The former is chief surgeon at Georgetown University and Providence Hospitals.

Mrs. Longworth Opens Home Here

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who has returned from a lecture tour, has opened her home here for the season. Her daughter, Pauline Longworth, who attends school in Cincinnati, is with her for the holidays.

Mrs. Longworth has ended her lectures for the time being, and will be in the Capital on and off through the winter.

Capt. and Mrs. Maddox And Family Are Here

Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton Maddox, who recently arrived here from Newport, R. I., are spending several days at their home on Belmont road.

With them for the holiday season are their two daughters and their son. Miss Muriel Maddox, who attends Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., is here; also Charles H. Maddox, jr., who is on vacation from Choate School, and Evelyn Maddox, who has been in school at Newport.

To Be 'at Home'

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb will be "at home" on Monday from 5 to 7 in the commandant's quarters at the Marine Barracks.

Frederick Hicks Entertains 50 At Dinner Dance

Frederick Hicks, here for the holidays from Kent School, entertained 50 of his friends at a dinner, followed by dancing, last evening at the Sulgrave Club. For the past few years Mr. Hicks has given a large dance at this season, but this time he decided to make it a smaller party.

Blue and white, the colors of his school, were carried out in the decorations, which the host and his mother, Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil, had brought from New York. The guests were seated at one large table, in the center of which were evergreens, colored blue and silver bells.

Present at the dinner were Walter Truslow, president of the Kent Glee Club, and Frederick Requardt, captain of the crew, who are visiting Mr. Hicks. The latter is president of his school's debating society.

Mrs. Macneil received with her son. The guests included members of Washington's sub-debutante set, among them the Misses Peggy Houghteling, Rose Chatfield-Taylor, Bella Hagner, Anne Huidekoper, and Louise Stillwell.

The host and his mother have been living at their country home on Long Island for the past year, and are just in Washington over the holidays.

Ambassadress Fetes Sub-Debs and Beaux

Strictly for sub-debs and their beaux was the tea dance given yesterday afternoon by Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, for her son and daughter, Homer and Miss Louise Stillwell. The only older person present besides the hostess was her mother, Mrs. Frank Letts, who assisted.

Senora de Espil and her daughter received in the wide hall at the head of the stairs. The former wore a black silk frock, street length and simply made, and Miss Stillwell was attired in silver lame.

About a hundred and twenty-five guests danced to the music of Sidney's Orchestra. There was also a fortune teller to predict the future of the young ladies and their escorts.

The embassy was gay with Christmas decorations. Wreaths hung at the windows, poinsettias and vases of crimson roses were everywhere.

McGoodwins Have Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin have with them until after New Year's, their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, of Rochester, N. Y., and their little daughter, Constance.

D.A.R. Asks Music of Americans

Mrs. Mead Leading Program to Favor Compositions of Native Writers

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

American music is a "must" on D. A. R. programs this year as a result of the project inaugurated by the National Society, under the leadership of Mrs. Edward G. Mead, of Oxford, Ohio, who last night addressed chapter music chairmen at the Willard Hotel.

With all due regard to Bach and Beethoven, Mrs. Mead three years ago started a movement throughout the D. A. R. chapters of Ohio, to promote appreciation of the music of American composers also. "The art, literature and drama of our own country for years have had recognition but no proportionate appreciation has been accorded its music," said Mrs. Mead. "It is not our purpose to exclude composers of other nations, past or present, from our programs, but to learn something of those of America and to familiarize ourselves with their works.

The plan she presented to the District chapters last night, as national chairman of the Committee on Appreciation of American Music, was to have a program devoted entirely to the subject once during the season, or to have some American music at each meeting.

Ohio Responsible For the Project

The appointment of Mrs. Mead as chairman of the national committee was the result of her success in the work in Ohio. For the past three years, during the term of Mrs. John S. Beaume, who is now national recording secretary, as State regent, she carried on the project. Last April, at the national D. A. R. congress, it was presented and accepted as part of the national program of patriotic education. The National Society, Children of the American Revolution, several years ago added a similar committee in its organization, with Mrs. Harold B. Gardner, of New Rochelle, N. Y., as its head.

Mrs. Mead, in a series of monthly articles in the National Historical Magazine of the D. A. R., has given the chapters suggestions for suitable music for the month ahead, taking "Through the Year With American Music" as her subject. She has classified it under three headings—seasonal, occasional and music of composers born in that month. She also has printed a booklet for State chairmen, giving information as to numbers suitable for special days of the D. A. R. calendar, such as the observance of Approved School Day and Ellis Island Day.

In addition to including American music in chapter programs, Mrs. Mead has asked members of the D. A. R. in all sections of the country to list the names, a short biography and the important works of composers who were born or had lived in their vicinity. In this way she hopes to awaken an appreciation of the work of musicians in each community and to compile a record covering the entire country.

Mrs. Lois M. Hicks Local Chairman

The District of Columbia D. A. R., for which Mrs. Lois Marshall Hicks is chairman of the committee, has already made a beginning in assembling this information. Among the composers listed are Mary Howe, Dean Shure and Edward Potter. Mrs. Hicks, who presided at last night's meeting, also proposed plans for an all-American concert early in the spring, on which local artists will present the works of American composers. She hopes to arrange it under the sponsorship of all the chapters.

Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, chairman of radio for the D. C. D. A. R., was also on last night's program and explained the way in which American music is being given recognition on the local D. A. R. radio broadcasts. Miss Lillian Chenoweth, state regent of the District and herself a musician, also attended the meeting.

Mrs. Mead is spending the week in the Capital, having come with her husband to attend the convention of the National Music Teachers' Association. Prof. Mead is director of organ and theory of music in the school of fine arts at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. He is attending in addition to the convention sessions, the meeting of the Musicological Society and Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity.

Mrs. Mead, a Vassar graduate and member of Delta Omicron national music sorority, is both a singer and a pianist. She is sorority mother of Mu Chapter at Oxford and is an active member of the National League of American Pen Women.

College Daughters Are Guests at Tea

University Women Entertain Daughters at Tea, Dance

Washington Branch Fetes Junior Group In Afternoon; Dinner Dance Marked by Holiday Gaiety

Yesterday was junior day at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, where members of the Washington branch entertained at a tea in the afternoon for their daughters and a dinner dance was given in the evening by the junior group.

Daughters of members, home from various colleges for the Christmas holidays, who were entertained in the afternoon, included Miss Betty Olesen, a Cornell student, who is the daughter of Mrs. Robert L. Olesen, president of the local branch.

A feature of the occasion was the singing of college songs by the guests, with Mrs. E. W. Gaumnitz at the piano. Everybody seemed to know the songs of all of the other colleges, as well as those of their own. The girls called out requests, one after another, which were followed by a chorus of voices singing the numbers.

The clubhouse is gaily decorated for the holidays and was a pretty setting for both of the parties. That in the evening was given by the junior group with several of the senior members, including Mrs. Olesen and Dr. Olesen, as guests.

The head table was decorated with a large centerpiece formed of blue and silver balls, arranged on a mirror, and was lighted with blue candles in silver candelabra, tied with silver ribbon.

College girls who were guests at the tea included:

Miss Emmy Jane Harbin, Mrs. J. E. Scandling, Miss Lorraine Coyle, Miss Betty Conrad, Miss Margaret Cheney, Miss Susan Montgomery, Mrs. Raymond Kerr, Miss Ruth Liles, Miss Sarah Dyer, Miss Jean Cromelin, Miss Betty Leake, Mrs. Robert Campbell, Miss Marcia Miller, Miss Eliza Miller, Miss Alice Powell, Miss Martha V. Miller, Miss Klovia McKennon, Miss Carolyn Lacey, Miss Irene Dulin, Miss Ella Harllee, Miss Margaret Swanton, Miss Edith Rathbun and Miss Donna Moser.

Among the club members and guests at the dance were Miss Mary Louise Chase, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ellsworth Colbert, Miss Margaret Cook, Miss Elizabeth Cooper, Miss Winifred DeVoe, Mr. and Mrs. M. Y. Garner, Miss Maxine Girts, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Haupt, Mr. and Mrs. F. Norman Hearn, Miss Floreine Hurley, Miss Alice Jewell, Mr. and Mrs. Julian King, Miss Virginia Kinnard, Mr. and Mrs. James Merritt, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Y. Olney, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Palmer, Miss Mildred Percy, Miss Jacqueline Pringle, Miss Jeannette Rudellat, Mr. and Mrs. Durward Sandifer, Mr. and Mrs. Algird Stephan, Miss Mary Vaccaro, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Whittaker and Miss Elsie Yost.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

MRS. LINDA P. LITTLEJOHN, of Sydney, Australia, president of Equal Rights International, will be a guest at tea today at Alvah Belmont House, headquarters of the National Woman's Party. Yesterday she was received by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Littlejohn, as president of Equal Rights International, has attended conferences all through Europe and in the Orient, but this is her first visit to America. She was met on her arrival in California a month ago by Mrs. Amy Ransome, a national officer of the Woman's Party, who flew West from Washington to greet her. Mrs. Ransome also entertained her at a dinner before she left for New York. There she has filled several lecture engagements, including one at Town Hall and on the Town Hall radio hour.

She is on her way back to England, where she has a son in school, after having been to her home in Sydney for the recent marriage of a daughter. She has done extensive lecturing both in Australia and England and has presented weekly broadcasts on current events.

Mrs. Littlejohn will remain in Washington until January 9 and while she is here will confer with Alice Paul, newly elected head of the World Woman's Party, with whom she has worked on many occasions at Geneva.

MRS. FREDERICK H. BROOKE, national president of the Girl Scouts of America, was a guest yesterday at the Girl Scouts Little House, where some of the members of local troops sang carols at an informal tea.

Mrs. Brooke greeted the girls and Mrs. E. G. Borman, hostess at the Little House, welcomed them as they arrived. Council members and other guests were present also. Mrs. Campbell Waters, chairman of District 3, poured.

THE LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN WOMEN, of which Mrs. Edward E. Gann is the new president, is planning to start the new year with a program of increased activity.

Monday, January 9, following the monthly business meeting, the league will be addressed by Representative Charles A. Plumley, of Vermont.

Morning meetings for political discussions have been set for Tuesday, January 17, and Tuesday, January 31, at 11 o'clock. Every Wednesday afternoon there will be the usual open house and tea at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street. Buffet luncheons are planned there on Thursday, January 12, and Tuesday, January 24, and a card party will be held Friday, January 20, at the home of Mrs. James G. Wentz, 2841 McGill terrace.

The Comrades Class of Keller Memorial Church will have a candlelight Christmas program this evening with both China and Japan represented. Miss Saiko Neshio will tell the story of Christmas in Japan and Miss Ching Chong Hung will talk on Christmas in China.

Smith Club Here Plans Luncheon For 5 Students

Five Smith College girls whose home is in Washington will be guests of honor at the holiday luncheon of the local Smith College Club tomorrow at the Parrot Tearoom. But they will have to "sing for their supper." Local alumnae are asking these undergraduates to bring them news of the plan for general honors, the athletic association, a year of study in Scotland, and co-operative housing on the Smith campus in Northampton, Mass.

The speakers will be Lucy Hastings, Joan Wright, Elizabeth Reed, Elizabeth Sabine and Alice Leake. Other undergraduates who will be present are Janet Carlson, Mary Jackson, Catharine Gardiner, Louise Kimble, Josephine Kaufman, Evans Vaughan, Mary Mink and Mary Ingles.

Mrs. Frederic J. Libby, president of the club, will preside at the luncheon.

Unrest Causes Cancellation of Peace Meeting

Many Women Can't Attend, So Conference Here Is Called Off

The tense international situation in Europe has resulted in the cancellation of the Intercontinental Peace Conference of Women Leaders, which was to have been held here at the Washington Hotel immediately folowing the fourteenth annual Conference on the Cause and Cure of War on January 21-25.

One after another of the outstanding women who had been expected from more than 20 countries, have sent word they cannot attend, according to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, of New Rochelle, N. Y., honorary chairman of the Cause and Cure of War Conference.

A few of the women who had intended to be here will follow their original plans despite the cancellation of the Intercontinental Conference and will be present for the sessions on the Cause and Cure of War. This will open Saturday evening, January 21, with a review of events of the past year by James G. McDonald, of he New York Times.

On Sunday afternoon, keeping to the schedule first announced, there will be a meeting addressed by some of the foreign women, although no definite announcement as to the program has been made since the cancellation of the proposed intercontinental conclave. This conference, sponsored by the Disarmament Committee at Geneva, was to have been held on the Western Hemisphere for the first time.

The delegates to the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War had looked forward to gaining from the European women an interpretation of "much that is puzzling in foreign affairs by those who share our aims but who are having these tested daily on the sharp edge of experience," according to the call of the conference.

In the call to the conference it is also pointed out:

"Stronger bulwarks and readier implements of peace must be contrived against the destructive forces which are reaching into every country in the world. Against the tremendous resourcefulness of war must be marshaled all our untapped reserves of faith, stamina, intelligence and power and, as this race between education and catastrophe becomes immeasurably accelerated, it is of supreme importance that all our lines of communication with one another be kept open and operating to capacity—not only in this country, but wherever those of like mind can be reached."

Miss Josephine Schain, who has just been elected president of the Chautauqua Woman's Club, is president of the committee on the cause and cure of war.

The 11 co-operating organizations include the American Association of University Women, General Federation of Women's Clubs, Young Women's Christian Association, National Committee of Church Women, National Council of Jewish Women, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, National Home Demonstration Council, National League of Women Voters, National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, National Women's Conference of American Ethical Union and National Women's Trade Union League.

Mrs. A. D. Solomon Is Elected President

Mrs. A. D. Solomon was elected president of the Washington Chapter of the National Home for Jewish Children yesterday afternoon succeeding Mrs. Albert W. Jacobson

Other officers elected to serve with with Mrs. Solomon were Mrs. Ellis Kossow, first vice president; Mrs. Lamarr Harper, second vice president; Mrs. Murray Kiczales, treasurer; Mrs. Solomon Feldman, financial secretary; Mrs. Frank Wool, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jack Seigal, recording secretary, and Mrs. Jacobson and Mrs. Hyman Berman, trustees.

Tuckerman House Given To Capital

16th St. Landmark Donated to Library Of Congress by Porter's Stepdaughter

The Tuckerman house, famous Sixteenth street landmark and residence of the late Representative Henry Kirke Porter, has been given to the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian Institution by his stepdaughter, Miss Annie-May Hegeman, of New York.

Located on the southwest corner of Sixteenth and I streets, the property occupies the entire area between the Hay-Adams Hotel and I street. It is assessed for slightly under $400,000 and is about 22,000 square feet in area.

Announcement of the gift was made yesterday by Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, and Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian.

In a letter to the trust fund board of the library, Miss Hegeman stated that, upon a sale of the property one-half of the proceeds are to be delivered to the Smithsonian Institution, the other half to be retained by the trust fund board as a fund for the benefit of the library, with a suggestion, though not a requirement, that the income from this be used for maintenance of its staff of "consultants."

Negotiations for transfer of the house and grounds have been completed and the deed was recorded last Thursday.

Miss Hegeman's gift to the Government, a memorial to Mr. Porter, will be devoted to "the increase and diffusion of knowledge."

The fine furniture and numerous objects of art contained in the house has been presented to museums by Miss Hegeman.

Miss Hegeman requested the gift be designated as "the Henry Kirke Porter Memorial Fund."

Tuckermans From New England

In the early eighties the aristocratic Tuckerman family of New England became enamored of this city on a visit and decided to live here.

The elderly Lucius Tuckerman purchased a part of what was then Corcoran Gardens, and built the house at 1600 I street.

The following is taken from "Notes on the Tuckerman Family of Massachusetts," written by Bayard Tuckerman, a son:

"He (Lucius-Tuckerman) planned with entire success to combine homelike comfort with adaptability to entertaining. On the left, as one entered, was a reception room, where hung most of the family portraits . . . Windows looked to the east and south, so that the winter's sun extended a welcome after breakfast and cheered throughout the day . . ."

Mantel From New York

A feature of the drawing room was the white marble mantel, the author states. It came from a famous old New York landmark owned by a Capt. Archibald Kennedy, where Bayard Tuckerman's mother attended her first ball in 1836.

It was in this house that the Tuckerman children heard their first stories of the Civil War. In this connection Bayard Tuckerman wrote:

"When they began to live in Washington, it was a somewhat novel experience to find friends among soldiers and statesmen of the Confederate side during the Civil War."

Open to Offers of Sale

Dr. Putnam said no decision has been reached as to the sale of the property, but the board has authorized him "to consider any offers."

Representative Porter was the stepfather of Miss Hegeman, having married her mother, Mrs. Annie DeCamp Hegeman, in 1875. A native of New Hampshire, alumnus of Brown University, he prepared for the ministry but became a manufacturer in Pittsburgh.

He was elected to the Fifty-eighth Congress and came to Washington for that one term. In 1907 he acquired the property. With his wife and stepdaughter, he habitually wintered here until his death in 1921. Mrs. Porter died in 1925.

Auto Accidents Injure 6 Here

Mrs. Catherine Thompson, 43, of 6925 Maple street northwest, suffered face lacerations and a possible brain concussion last night when struck by an automobile as she stepped from a loading platform in front of the Brightwood car barns on Georgia avenue. She was removed to the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park after treatment at Walter Reed Hospital.

In traffic accidents yesterday Florence Glumpman, 26, 478 I street southwest, suffered a fractured ankle and Richard Price, 27, Kensington, Md., received cuts; Walter N. Ricketts, 49, 1418 W street northwest, suffered bruises and fractured ribs when struck by a hit-run auto; Carl Yohansen, 67, 214 John Marshall place northwest, possible fractures to left hip and pelvis, and Clifton Limerick, 13, 510 Seward Square southeast, cuts and bruises.

Steve to Resume Peanut Vending at Old Stand Today

Steve Vasilakos, the White House peanut and popcorn vender, plans to be back at his stand at the northeast corner of the White House today—apparently recovered from the heart attack that sent him to Emergency Hospital Monday.

Steve took the day off yesterday and rested up a bit, but did not remain in bed. He was up and about at 7:30 a. m. At the Patterson Hotel in the 1700 block of Pennsylvania avenue, where he has lived for 9 years, he said his knees buckled under him.

Dioramas Give Woman Cyclist of 90's Credit For Pulling American Highways Out of Mud

Public Roads Bureau Here Prepares Show For San Francisco Fair

The woman cyclist of the gay nineties comes in for her share of credit in pulling the highways from the mud in the dioramic story of transportation improvement which has been prepared by the United States Bureau of Public Roads as part of the San Francisco World's Fair.

Although the "dark ages of the roads" came in 1850, when the railroads almost "put them out of business," no marked improvement came, it appears, until the bicycling days of 1892. The feminine cyclist, thinking of her new sailor and provoked by the indifference of farmers who didn't care where the road went nor when it got there, stood only a few drenchings and then started some "movements." Of course, the horseless carriage coming along when it did helped some.

A preview of the transportation display, which presents several new ideas in the making and showing of dioramas, will be given Washington during the next three days. Then the setup which makes it possible to view 400 years of road history in 15 minutes, with speech and musical accompaniment being run off on a sound film simultaneously, will be torn down for shipment to the West Coast.

For more than a year and a half highway experts, artists and technicians have been at work on the elaborate display. Shallow diorama trays with work done in bas relief rather than full round form are some of the innovations which have resulted.

Another is the mechanism which makes it possible for the whole exhibition of 35 complete dioramas to be "run off" with the turn of an electric button. H. W. Hendley, artist and sculptor; Carl Raleman, artist and designer, and C. H. Frey, mechanical technician, were among those responsible for the artistic and finished effect of the exhibition.

Sixteen hundred feet of movie film was needed for the sound effects. In addition to carefully worded explanations, music fitted to the period depicted in each diorama is included.

De Soto and the horses he brought to the new world, Indian canoes, tobacco roads, the Erie canal, the pony express, the Boone trail, the first cross-continental trip by truck, the old Natchez Trace, and some modern beauties are among the scenes presented. The exhibition ends with a diorama of the new San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Pedestrian Control Hearing on WMAL

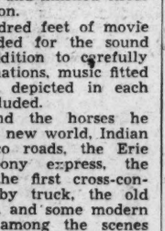
A radio broadcast will bring to Washington homes tomorrow's public hearing on proposals to subject pedestrians to traffic control.

The hearing, called by the District Commissioners to test public reaction to the proposals, will be held in the board room of the District Building. The National Broadcasting Co. announced last night it would broadcast the first half-hour of the discussion, starting at 10 a. m., on WMAL.

Letters on the subject will be solicited from listeners and turned over to the Commissioners.

Senate Terms to End for 3 Before They Ever Take Seats

Sorry she was not elected for a full term in the Senate, Miss Gladys C. Pyle will leave Washington soon after Congress convenes without ever having attended a meeting of that body officially.



MISS GLADYS C. PYLE

But the month and five days she is spending in the Nation's Capital as a lawmaker will have been worthwhile, both for herself and the taxpayers back in North Dakota, although she never casts a vote, she declared yesterday.

Elected November 8 to succeed Herbert E. Hitchcock for the term expiring January 3, the lame duck (or is it duchess?) Senator delayed coming to the District of Columbia until after Thanksgiving—for which she now is duly sorry.

"I wish I had come the day after election. Just because the Senate is not in session is no sign a Senator cannot be of service to her constituents. I have worked very hard. The letters keep pouring in," she said, listing civil service aid, park work, citizenship status of some North Dakotans and WPA matters as among her "accomplishments."

"The most popular thing I have done, of course," she said, "was to get a promise from the Prince and Princess of Norway that they would visit my State when they are here in the spring."

Whether she will take home the name plate on her office door as a "reminder" or not, she has not decided.

Senator T. M. Storke, who was appointed November 9 to fill the unexpired term of William Gibbs McAdoo, has not stayed in Washington as much as Miss Pyle; but he declares that what he thought was going to be a "senatorial honeymoon" has not turned out that way.

Senator Alexander G. Barry, of Oregon, the other lame ducker, has employed a full office force—but did not bring them all to Washington. He arrived in town first about a week ago and will be back for the opening of Congress.

Bishop Urges Alien Loyalty To U. S. Ideals

Lack of Respect for Land Which Shelters Them Scored

Bishop James E. Freeman declared yesterday that certain groups of aliens from dictator-ridden states who have become American citizens ought to show "a finer exhibition of loyalty to our ideals."

In an address broadcast by Station WMAL, he made special reference to those who "have escaped the tyrannies and privations of the land of their birth, and yet show ingratitude and contempt for the land of their adoption."

"They lack the spirit of good will," he added. "They respect not the flag that shelters them, and they deny to the institutions that guarantee to them a freedom they have never before known their loyal adherence and support."

The American people, he declared, have the physical means to go forward to a better day, but "lack confidence in ourselves and in each other and the moral courage to pursue our defined course, unhindered by influences from within and without."

3 Contracts Awarded for PWA Projects

Partial Construction Assured on All D. C. Works Programs

Partial construction work on all public works projects in the District by the January 1 deadline was assured yesterday when the Commissioners awarded three contracts some hours after the bids were opened.

Although there remain contracts for certain superstructures on the $18,150,000 program to be awarded, the Commissioners let contracts for foundation and excavation work just to meet the requirements of PWA that all work begin this year.

DeLashmutt Bros., Inc., of Arlington, Va., was awarded a contract for the construction of the Northeast boundary sewer replacement from Twentieth and A streets to Nineteenth and C streets northeast. This firm will receive $214,335 for the job.

M. Wertheimer & Co., 215 Evans Building, of this city, will receive $58,948 for building an assembly hall and gymnasium for Bancroft School, Newtown street, between Mount Pleasant and Eighteenth streets northwest.

A contract for excavations for Ward Building No. 2 at Gallinger Hospital was awarded to John W. Hunt Co., 216 Randolph place northeast. This firm will receive $2,975.

Crawford Wins Takoma Contest

Winners of the Christmas home-lighting-display contest sponsored by the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce were announced last night.

First prize went to Arthur C. Crawford, 429 Butternut street northwest, for a manger scene on the porch of his home. Judge H. C. Heffner, 107 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who took first place last year, was awarded second prize, while third prize went to J. A. Downs, 7135 Eighth street northwest.

Judges were Emmett Brandt, president of the Takoma Park Lions Club; Mrs. Pauline Heffner, president of the Junior Women's Club; C. W. Moore, president of the Takoma Horticultural Club; R. H. Fiedler, vice president of the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association, and Dr. Guy Clinton, president of the Community League, Takoma Park, Md.

Merit Status Proposed for State Clerks

Ramspeck Would Put All Paid by U. S. In Civil Service to Stop Corruption

Political corruption alleged to exist among State workers paid with Federal funds will be made an issue in a bill to be introduced by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, calling for a civil service system for every State employe paid by the Federal Government.

The bill Ramspeck is preparing for introduction in the next Congress would make civil service status mandatory on every State worker whose salary comes from a Federal appropriation, a step regarded as strengthening the fast-growing movement for a merit government and as putting the finger definitely on job-giving and vote-getting under Federal works in the States.

Senator James M. Mead, (Democrat), New York, in a formal statement yesterday, said: "The time has come for extension of the merit system to all permanent agencies of Government. We should extend the merit system not alone to Federal agencies, but to agencies developing in local governments where Federal funds are utilized . . . Permanency of employment and independence in political matters will be given to such employes as are brought under the merit system."

Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway told The Post that the commission is prepared to pass on the soundness and validity of such civil service systems as the States might set up. Under present facilities the commission could not undertake to establish State systems or give examinations. It could, however, pass on merits of systems set up now or later, it was said.

Ramspeck said he had no idea how many people are working in the States under Federal funds, but knew the number ran high in the thousands.

Hunter Catches Spotted Fever On Virginia Trip

A case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever—extremely rare at this time of the year—was reported to District health officials yesterday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said two cases of tularemia, or rabbit fever, had also been reported to the Health Department.

The spotted fever victim contracted the disease early this month while on a hunting trip in Virginia, Dr. Cumming stated.

"The tick which causes the disease usually hibernates at the sign of the first frost," Dr. Cumming said.

Health authorities said this was the latest case on record in the East. In the Rocky Mountain section, particularly in Montana, there have been a few cases late in the year, Dr. Cumming said.

Purse Snatcher Hurts Woman, 55

Mrs. Susie A. Thompson, 55, 2013 New Hampshire avenue northwest, suffered minor injuries last night when she was thrown to the ground by an unidentified colored man, who took her purse containing $2.

Mrs. Thompson, who is employed by the Veterans' Administration, told police the man accosted here at New Hampshire avenue and U street.

Music Pupils Write, Play, Take Dictation at Same Time

New Methods Described in Preparation For Meeting of Teachers' Association, Which Opens Here This Afternoon

New methods of musical dictation in which the student writes music, plays it and takes the dictation all at the same time were being studied yesterday by delegates to the meeting of the National Association of Schools of Music as a forerunner to the sixtieth annual meeting of the Music Teachers National Association opening today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Advance registration for the music teachers meeting indicated a record attendance, convention officials said. More than 1,000 authorities on music from throughout the Nation are expected.

The National Association of Schools of Music, one of three other organizations meeting in conjunction with the Music Teachers Association, held its first sessions yesterday. The American Musicological Society and the Phi Mu Alpha (Sinfonia) Fraternity also will meet with the music teachers in their three-day convention.

Like Office Dictation

Burnet C. Tuthill, director of music at Southwestern College, Memphis, Tenn., secretary of the N. A. S. M., discussing recent developments in methods of teaching music, said that three units formerly taught as separate classes have now been combined into one unit—achieving a "streamlined" process of teaching.

"In the business office the 'boss' dictates and his secretary takes it down in shorthand," Tuthill explained. "It is the same in teaching. But the student takes down what he hears in music."

Standards adopted which college students specializing in music must be able to meet were thrown on a screen in conjunction with a report by Allen McHose, of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y.

One film, "melodic dictation," presented a picture of what the music student must be able to present after hearing the selection "dictated" from a record or by instruments.

Played By Phrases

In the dictation, the first note of the selection is given, then played through twice to give the student an indication as to key and meter. Then it is played by phrases, with the student transcribing into notes what he hears.

"Recently developed methods of teaching correlate harmony, listening and keyboard units formerly taught separately into one," McHose said. "Thus the student sits at the keyboard, where he learns to play the chord, listens and then writes it down."

The N. A. S. M., organized in 1924 for the purpose of setting basic standards for degrees in music, acts in capacity of an accrediting agency for music schools as the American Bar Association and the American Association do in the law and medical schools, Tuthill said.

Tuthill will be honor guest at a concert tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Constitution Hall by the National Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, as the climax of the opening day sessions of the Music Teachers convention. The Washington Choral Society, directed by Louis Potter, and Evelyn Swarthout, American pianist, will appear on the program tonight.

A reception for delegates to the music teachers meeting given at the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt today at 4 p. m. will highlight the day's sessions, getting underway at 1:30 p. m. with Edwin Hughes, of New York, president of the national organization, presiding.

Edward Johnson to Speak

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will welcome the edelgates, and Dean D. M. Swarthout, of the University of Kansas, will respond. Ernest La Prade, of the National Broadcasting Co., Ernest G. Hesser, of New York University, and Henry E. Meyer, of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., will speak in the afternoon.

Sessions of the convention will continue tomorrow and Friday with a program of concerts and recitals running concurrently.

The little symphony orchestra of the Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity, Eastman School of Music, will present a concert today at 5 p. m. under direction of Frederick Fennell. Advance registration yesterday indicated a registration of over 700 delegates from virtually every State in the Nation. Dr. Harold Spivacke, head of the committee on convention arrangements, estimated, adding that more than 300 Washingtonians are expected to register.

Citizens Ask More Funds to Heat Schools

Southeast Group Names Delegates To Hearing on Pedestrian Control

Threatened shortage of school funds, control of the pedestrian in traffic, taxicab rates and the proposed tax on chain stores were some of the problems considered last night by the Southeast Washington Citizens Association meeting at Buchanan School.

Mrs. Allan Davis, who has charge of Community Center activities in the southeast area, told the association of efforts of public school teachers to cut lighting and heating bills lest funds for these purposes be exhausted before more money becomes available.

Deficiency Fund Asked

After listening to her the association voted to write the Commissioners and the School Board urging their support for a deficiency appropriation to supply funds to keep the schools amply heated and lighted.

Regulation of pedestrian traffic in downtown business sections of the city was approved in another resolution. Vernis Absher was named to represent the association at a pedestrian control hearing at the District Building tomorrow.

After talks by G. E. Burrows and A. L. Livfie, representing a group of 1,400 taxicab drivers, the association decided to support their plan for realignment of taxicab zones and rates.

Clem Named Secretary

In a fourth resolution, the organization expressed its opposition to the Patman bill to levy a sales tax on chain stores.

William C. Wise, of the American Congress for Peace and Democracy, told of aims of his organization, but the association decided not to name a delegate to it.

C. C. Clem was elected association secretary, succeeding George Glick, resigned. A. F. T. Raum, the Rev. George H. Bennett and Raymond C. Dyer were inducted into association membership.

Elected November 8 to succeed Herbert E. Hitchcock for the term expiring January 3, the lame duck (or is it duchess?) Senator delayed coming to the District of Columbia until after Thanksgiving—for which she now is duly sorry.

"I wish I had come the day after election. Just because the Senate is not in session is no sign a Senator cannot be of service to her constituents. I have worked very hard. The letters keep pouring in," she said, listing civil service aid, park work, citizenship status of some North Dakotans and WPA matters as among her "accomplishments."

"The most popular thing I have done, of course," she said, "was to get a promise from the Prince and Princess of Norway that they would visit my State when they are here in the spring."

Whether she will take home the name plate on her office door as a "reminder" or not, she has not decided.

Senator T. M. Storke, who was appointed November 9 to fill the unexpired term of William Gibbs McAdoo, has not stayed in Washington as much as Miss Pyle; but he declares that what he thought was going to be a "senatorial honeymoon" has not turned out that way.

Senator Alexander G. Barry, of Oregon, the other lame ducker, has employed a full office force—but did not bring them all to Washington. He arrived in town first about a week ago and will be back for the opening of Congress.

Bishop Urges Alien Loyalty To U. S. Ideals

Lack of Respect for Land Which Shelters Them Scored

Bishop James E. Freeman declared yesterday that certain groups of aliens from dictator-ridden states who have become American citizens ought to show "a finer exhibition of loyalty to our ideals."

In an address broadcast by Station WMAL, he made special reference to those who "have escaped the tyrannies and privations of the land of their birth, and yet show ingratitude and contempt for the land of their adoption."

"They lack the spirit of good will," he added. "They respect not the flag that shelters them, and they deny to the institutions that guarantee to them a freedom they have never before known their loyal adherence and support."

The American people, he declared, have the physical means to go forward to a better day, but "lack confidence in ourselves and in each other and the moral courage to pursue our defined course, unhindered by influences from within and without."

3 Contracts Awarded for PWA Projects

Partial Construction Assured on All D. C. Works Programs

Partial construction work on all public works projects in the District by the January 1 deadline was assured yesterday when the Commissioners awarded three contracts some hours after the bids were opened.

Although there remain contracts for certain superstructures on the $18,150,000 program to be awarded, the Commissioners let contracts for foundation and excavation work just to meet the requirements of PWA that all work begin this year.

DeLashmutt Bros., Inc., of Arlington, Va., was awarded a contract for the construction of the Northeast boundary sewer replacement from Twentieth and A streets to Nineteenth and C streets northeast. This firm will receive $214,335 for the job.

M. Wertheimer & Co., 215 Evans Building, of this city, will receive $58,948 for building an assembly hall and gymnasium for Bancroft School, Newtown street, between Mount Pleasant and Eighteenth streets northwest.

A contract for excavations for Ward Building No. 2 at Gallinger Hospital was awarded to John W. Hunt Co., 216 Randolph place northeast. This firm will receive $2,975.

Crawford Wins Takoma Contest

Winners of the Christmas home-lighting-display contest sponsored by the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce were announced last night.

First prize went to Arthur C. Crawford, 429 Butternut street northwest, for a manger scene on the porch of his home. Judge H. C. Heffner, 107 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who took first place last year, was awarded second prize, while third prize went to J. A. Downs, 7135 Eighth street northwest.

Judges were Emmett Brandt, president of the Takoma Park Lions Club; Mrs. Pauline Heffner, president of the Junior Women's Club; C. W. Moore, president of the Takoma Horticultural Club; R. H. Fiedler, vice president of the Takoma Park (D. C.) Citizens Association, and Dr. Guy Clinton, president of the Community League, Takoma Park, Md.

Merit Status Proposed for State Clerks

Ramspeck Would Put All Paid by U. S. In Civil Service to Stop Corruption

Political corruption alleged to exist among State workers paid with Federal funds will be made an issue in a bill to be introduced by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, calling for a civil service system for every State employe paid by the Federal Government.

The bill Ramspeck is preparing for introduction in the next Congress would make civil service status mandatory on every State worker whose salary comes from a Federal appropriation, a step regarded as strengthening the fast-growing movement for a merit government and as putting the finger definitely on job-giving and vote-getting under Federal works in the States.

Senator James M. Mead, (Democrat), New York, in a formal statement yesterday, said: "The time has come for extension of the merit system to all permanent agencies of Government. We should extend the merit system not alone to Federal agencies, but to agencies developing in local governments where Federal funds are utilized . . . Permanency of employment and independence in political matters will be given to such employes as are brought under the merit system."

Civil Service Commissioner Samuel H. Ordway told The Post that the commission is prepared to pass on the soundness and validity of such civil service systems as the States might set up. Under present facilities the commission could not undertake to establish State systems or give examinations. It could, however, pass on merits of systems set up now or later, it was said.

Ramspeck said he had no idea how many people are working in the States under Federal funds, but knew the number ran high in the thousands.

Hunter Catches Spotted Fever On Virginia Trip

A case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever—extremely rare at this time of the year—was reported to District health officials yesterday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said two cases of tularemia, or rabbit fever, had also been reported to the Health Department.

The spotted fever victim contracted the disease early this month while on a hunting trip in Virginia, Dr. Cumming stated.

"The tick which causes the disease usually hibernates at the sign of the first frost," Dr. Cumming said.

Health authorities said this was the latest case on record in the East. In the Rocky Mountain section, particularly in Montana, there have been a few cases late in the year, Dr. Cumming said.

Purse Snatcher Hurts Woman, 55

Mrs. Susie A. Thompson, 55, 2013 New Hampshire avenue northwest, suffered minor injuries last night when she was thrown to the ground by an unidentified colored man, who took her purse containing $2.

Mrs. Thompson, who is employed by the Veterans' Administration, told police the man accosted here at New Hampshire avenue and U street.

$100 Blaze in Store

A large after-theater crowd at Fourteenth street and Columbia road northwest last night watched firemen break into a Whelan drug store and extinguish a fire in a phone booth. The loss was $100.

Music Pupils Write, Play, Take Dictation at Same Time

New Methods Described in Preparation For Meeting of Teachers' Association, Which Opens Here This Afternoon

New methods of musical dictation in which the student writes music, plays it and takes the dictation all at the same time were being studied yesterday by delegates to the meeting of the National Association of Schools of Music as a forerunner to the sixtieth annual meeting of the Music Teachers National Association opening today at the Mayflower Hotel.

Advance registration for the music teachers meeting indicated a record attendance, convention officials said. More than 1,000 authorities on music from throughout the Nation are expected.

The National Association of Schools of Music, one of three other organizations meeting in conjunction with the Music Teachers Association, held its first sessions yesterday. The American Musicological Society and the Phi Mu Alpha (Sinfonia) Fraternity also will meet with the music teachers in their three-day convention.

Like Office Dictation

Burnet C. Tuthill, director of music at Southwestern College, Memphis, Tenn., secretary of the N. A. S. M., discussing recent developments in methods of teaching music, said that three units formerly taught as separate classes have now been combined into one unit—achieving a "streamlined" process of teaching.

"In the business office the 'boss' dictates and his secretary takes it down in shorthand," Tuthill explained. "It is the same in teaching. But the student takes down what he hears in music."

Standards adopted which college students specializing in music must be able to meet were thrown on a screen in conjunction with a report by Allen McHose, of the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y.

One film, "melodic dictation," presented a picture of what the music student must be able to present after hearing the selection "dictated" from a record or by instruments.

Played By Phrases

In the dictation, the first note of the selection is given, then played through twice to give the student an indication as to key and meter. Then it is played by phrases, with the student transcribing into notes what he hears.

"Recently developed methods of teaching correlate harmony, listening and keyboard units formerly taught separately into one," McHose said. "Thus the student sits at the keyboard, where he learns to play the chord, listens and then writes it down."

The N. A. S. M., organized in 1924 for the purpose of setting basic standards for degrees in music, acts in capacity of an accrediting agency for music schools as the American Bar Association and the American Association do in the law and medical schools, Tuthill said.

Tuthill will be honor guest at a concert tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Constitution Hall by the National Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor, as the climax of the opening day sessions of the Music Teachers convention. The Washington Choral Society, directed by Louis Potter, and Evelyn Swarthout, American pianist, will appear on the program tonight.

A reception for delegates to the music teachers meeting given at the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt today at 4 p. m. will highlight the day's sessions, getting underway at 1:30 p. m. with Edwin Hughes, of New York, president of the national organization, presiding.

Edward Johnson to Speak

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will welcome the edelgates, and Dean D. M. Swarthout, of the University of Kansas, will respond. Ernest La Prade, of the National Broadcasting Co., Ernest G. Hesser, of New York University, and Henry E. Meyer, of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., will speak in the afternoon.

Sessions of the convention will continue tomorrow and Friday with a program of concerts and recitals running concurrently.

The little symphony orchestra of the Phi Mu Alpha Fraternity, Eastman School of Music, will present a concert today at 5 p. m. under direction of Frederick Fennell. Advance registration yesterday indicated a registration of over 700 delegates from virtually every State in the Nation. Dr. Harold Spivacke, head of the committee on convention arrangements, estimated, adding that more than 300 Washingtonians are expected to register.

Citizens Ask More Funds to Heat Schools

Southeast Group Names Delegates To Hearing on Pedestrian Control

Threatened shortage of school funds, control of the pedestrian in traffic, taxicab rates and the proposed tax on chain stores were some of the problems considered last night by the Southeast Washington Citizens Association meeting at Buchanan School.

Mrs. Allan Davis, who has charge of Community Center activities in the southeast area, told the association of efforts of public school teachers to cut lighting and heating bills lest funds for these purposes be exhausted before more money becomes available.

Deficiency Fund Asked

After listening to her the association voted to write the Commissioners and the School Board urging their support for a deficiency appropriation to supply funds to keep the schools amply heated and lighted.

Regulation of pedestrian traffic in downtown business sections of the city was approved in another resolution. Vernis Absher was named to represent the association at a pedestrian control hearing at the District Building tomorrow.

After talks by G. E. Burrows and A. L. Livfie, representing a group of 1,400 taxicab drivers, the association decided to support their plan for realignment of taxicab zones and rates.

Clem Named Secretary

In a fourth resolution, the organization expressed its opposition to the Patman bill to levy a sales tax on chain stores.

William C. Wise, of the American Congress for Peace and Democracy, told of aims of his organization, but the association decided not to name a delegate to it.

C. C. Clem was elected association secretary, succeeding George Glick, resigned. A. F. T. Raum, the Rev. George H. Bennett and Raymond C. Dyer were inducted into association membership.

16 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 28, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Mr. Howard Says No!

Mr. Charles S. Howard, who sells automobiles for a living and runs race horses as a profitible hobby, has let it be known that there will be no Seabiscuit-War Admiral encore in Florida this winter. Not in so many words did he say it, but he emphatically implied as much when he telephoned Trainer Tom Smith at Aiken, S. C., to ship the Biscuit to California.

POVICH.

There has been talk of a Seabiscuit-War Admiral race at Hialeah ever since Mr. Samuel Riddle, who owns the Admiral, announced that his stable's pride would not be retired to the stud for another year. The Riddle people, stung by the four-length beating delivered the Admiral in the Pimlico match race by Seabiscuit, wanted another crack at the Howard horse. And the Hialeah Park people announced they would post a $40,000 purse for the race.

The fact that the purse was put at $40,000 was a move calculated to make it worth Mr. Howard's while to race the Biscuit against the Admiral. A stake at a less figure would not have been attractive to the Howard stable inasmuch as Seabiscuit needs at least $36,265 in additional earnings to top Sun Beau's record of $276,744 in purses won, and that is Howard's goal.

But Howard was torn between Hialeah's $40,000 offer and the prospect of another shot for Seabiscuit at the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap in March. Obviously, even as seasoned a traveler as the Biscuit could not compete in both events. Despite the outcome of the last Seabiscuit-War Admiral affair and the reasonable probability that Seabiscuit would win again and thus top Sun Beau's money-winning mark, Howard doubtless had little intention of accepting another War Admiral match.

For one thing he has his heart set on winning the $100,000 Santa Anita with Seabiscuit. Beaten by a nose last year by Stagehand, and beaten by the proverbial whisker by Rosemont in 1936, the saga of Seabiscuit in the Santa Anita has been a sad one. Last year, at the Santa Anita victory ball, the ballroom was already decorated in red and white, the colors of Howard's stable, in anticipation of a Seabiscuit victory. Winning the Santa Anita has become something of a passion with Howard, a native Californian.

Waited for Weights

Howard, however, gave no intimation of any choice between California and Florida racing until the weights for next March's Santa Anita were announced. He kept Seabiscuit in winter quarters at Aiken, S. C., and apparently was giving serious consideration to the War Admiral match. But now it is clear that Howard, by keeping his horse in the East, was merely being shrewd about it in an attempt to get Seabiscuit a fair break in the weights for the Santa Anita. With the Biscuit on the ground in California, the Santa Anita handicappers might have taken for granted that the horse would be in the race and saddled him with a harsh impost. Luring him from the East was another thing, however.

They finally assigned the Biscuit 134 pounds which apparently was satisfactory to Howard, whose star picks up only 4 pounds over his 1937 impost despite his sensational 1938 campaign. Anyway, it was not long after the weights were announced that Howard ordered his horse to be brought to California.

If Seabiscuit should rid himself of his seeming jinx, Howard would not only own the horse that set a new all-time record for earnings, but the record would probably stand for all time. The $90,000 that goes to the Santa Anita winner would boost Seabiscuit's earnings to $430,480, a figure that no future thoroughbred is apt even to challenge seriously.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sunbriar stud has long capitalized on Sun Beau's record as the top money winner and Seabiscuit when he is ready to retire would bring profitable stud fees. But despite his victory over War Admiral, Seabiscuit as a sire is not apt to be as richly sought as the son of Man o' War.

Admiral's Star Dimmed

Had War Admiral won the Pimlico match race with Seabiscuit he might have commanded stud fees that would set a new high, but his star was dimmed by that race, which, for this distance, seemed poor management on the part of the Riddle stable which had little to gain, much to lose. Thus it is that the Riddle people are eager for a chance to wipe out that blot. But save for that race, War Admiral has a record superior to Seabiscuit's and when he retires to the stud he will bring higher fees as a stallion.

At Santa Anita, Seabiscuit will doubtless go to the post as the favorite in the $100,000 Handicap, but until he gets down in front there will be anxious moments for Mr. Howard. There is always the possibility that another Stagehand, in the race with 100 pounds, will crop up. In a field that may number as many as 18 starters, and to which Seabiscuit will be giving weight concessions of as much as 34 pounds, there may be a "sleeper."

The winner of that 1936 Santa Anita would not have been Rosemont but a horse named Aneroid save for a most unfortunate accident, I am reliably informed by Watler Haight, who predicted a brilliant career for Aneroid.

Aneroid, entered for the Santa Anita, was sponged at Bowie in the preceding fall and was set back by an infection that followed. He had not yet begun to show his best talents, and would have gotten in the Santa Anita with about 100 pounds. But he had not yet fully recovered and was forced to decline the issue.

"But I would have liked to have seen a sound Aneroid in that Santa Anita with say 104 pounds," says Mr. Haight.

Nats Place Second in Club Batting

Average of .293 Is Six Points Below Boston's; Foxx Tops Hitters

Complete Averages on Page 21.

In the form of a back-hand slap at the Washington pitching staff, the 1938 official American League batting averages reveal that the Nats were the second-best hitting club in the league despite their failure to finish higher than fifth place.

Second only to the Boston Red Sox who led the league with a team batting average of .299 were the Nats last season. With a team average of .293, the Nats were 12 points better than the Indians and Browns who finished in a tie for third place and they batted 19 points more than the pennant-winning Yankees who showed a team average of only .274.

Thus do the batting figures pile up evidence against the Washington pitching which, supported by a .293 batting mark, failed to win half of its games.

Boston's Jimmy Foxx, staging a sensational comeback, topped all the league's hitters with a .349 average—the seventh infielder to win league batting honors in the past seven years. Foxx's closest rivals for the honors were Rookie Jeff Heath, Cleveland outfielder, who hit .343, and Ben Chapman, of the Red Sox, who batted .340.

Taft Wright was the Nats' nominal batting leader during the 1938 season with a .350 average, but the fact that he appeared in only 100 games, many as a pinch hitter, loses him recognition as the league's top batter. The actual leader of the Nats at bat in 1938 was the veteran Buddy Myer, who hit .336 and was fourth among the league's regulars, topping Shortstop Cecil Travis by a single point.

Three other Washington outfielders, Sammy West, George Case and Al Simmons were among the league's .300 hitters; West and Case with .305, and Simmons with a mark of .302.

The Nats were far more effective at home than abroad in 1938, according to the official figures. At Griffith Stadium, they won 44 and lost 33 for a percentage of .571, but they were a poor road club, losing 43 and winning 31 for a .419 average.

The Yankees, despite their sixth-place position in team batting, were the power club of the league, ac-

Petite Kin of Ziegfeld to Take Post Here As Professional Instructor at Ice Palace

De Lories Ziegfeld

By Jack Munhall.

A Ziegfeld, 97 pounds of petite, auburn-haired cousin to the late famous showman, will be a part of Washington's skating scenery as professional instructor at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace, it was learned yesterday.

Miss De Lores Ziegfeld, a veteran ice trouper at 23, with a background that embraces ballet, ballroom and adagio dancing, has tentatively agreed to join the Ice Palace staff. She is expected to sign a contract with Garfield Kass, owner of Washington's only rink.

Began Skating at 11

At a time when other girls of her age were still occupied with their dolls, Miss Ziegfeld embarked on her skating career as an 11-year-old and captured a succession of amateur skating titles. After winning the national pair championship with George Baakman, she turned professional in 1926 and went on tour with a skilled company of skaters and skiers known as the Winter Sports Carnival.

Miss Ziegfeld does not train or restrict her diet, should you be interested, for her weight scarcely ever varies, she says.

Baptie, a stocky, mild-mannered fellow with greying temples and a warm smile, is known wherever skating is known as a great performer and producer of colossal skating shows. He has been affiliated with major concerns in New York and Chicago and was instrumental in inducing Sonja Henie was starred. He continued in 1932.

Serving as director of the Ice Club at Madison Square Garden he produced "A Night in St. Moritz," and "Land of the Midnight Sun," the first two shows in which Miss Menie was starred. He continued in his capacity with at Madison Square Garden until 1933 when he began a world tour with his own show, Baptie's and Lamb's ice skating show, which appeared here at the Earle Theater.

Thirty-Year Champion

Baptie, who held the world's speed skating championship for 30 consecutive years, 1898-1928, holds many national and international records, including a barrel leap of 27 feet which has only been equaled once.

"I used to skate in races, too, but I'm too damned old for that now," the mild-mannered man who doesn't look more than 40 was saying last night. "Just like ballroom dancers and the rest, pretty soon your old legs begin to give out."

No Other Ambition

He never had any desire to be other than a skater, Baptie will tell you.

"No, I've had a happy life. I've earned more than $100,000 and I've built up a pretty good reputation.

His worst accident occurred in an exhibition in Canada. Just after he had leaped over ten barrels and the crowd was applauding his feat, he bowed too low and slipped, breaking his arm.

"Applause is always the most dangerous thing in show business," he was saying as the pretty Miss Ziegfeld interrupted to lead him off for dinner.

"You know, Norval," she smiled, "if I don't eat soon, I'll be down to 95 pounds tomorrow.

Vander Meer, McCarthy Honored

Sporting News Makes Annual Awards to Outstanding Men In Majors, Minors

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 27.—From the business office, bench and field, Warren C. Giles, Joe McCarthy and Johnny Vander Meer, of the major leagues, stood today with Lou McKenna, Paul Richards and Fred Hutchinson, of the minors, as baseball's No. 1 men of the year.

Giles and McKenna, executives; McCarthy and Richards, managers, and Vander Meer and Hutchinson, players, won their accolades from the Sporting News, baseball newspaper, for their work in 1938.

McCarthy's selection, of course, was for his record in leading the New York Yankees to their third straight world championship, and Vander Meer's for his unprecedented feat in pitching two consecutive no-hit, no-run games for the Cincinnati Reds.

Giles, vice president and general manager of the Reds, won designation as top executive for developing the Cincinnati farm system, assembling many of the team's players and helping club morale by his amicable salary negotiations. He also ably handled the All-Star National-American League game.

Corresponding minor league honors went to McKenna, secretary and business manager of St. Paul of the American Association, who was credited with the team's rise from seventh place in 1937 to the pennant in 1938. St. Paul had the highest attendance record in its history this past season.

Richards won recognition among minor league managers for his record with Atlanta, which won the Southern Association championship, both playoffs and the Dixie series.

Hutchinson, Seattle Pacific Coast League pitcher recently purchased by the Detroit Tigers for $50,000 and several players, was named the outstanding performer in the minors. He won 25 games and lost only seven.

Major league managers—Bill McKechnie, Cincinnati; Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cubs; Oscar Vitt, Cleveland.

Major league players—Bill Lee, Chicago Cub pitcher; Jimmy Foxx, Boston Red Sox first baseman; Hank Greenberg, Detroit first baseman; Charley Ruffing, New York Yankee pitcher; Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher; Joe Gordon, Yankee second baseman; Frank McCormick, Cincinnati first baseman; Buck Newsom, St. Louis Browns pitcher; Bill Dickey, Yankee catcher; Stan Hack, Chicago Cub third baseman; Pinky Higgins, third baseman recently traded by the Red Sox to Detroit, and Johnny Mize, St. Louis Cardinals firstsacker.

New Lion's Coach

ELMER (GUS) HENDERSON

Henderson New Detroit Lions Coach

Former Tulsa and Southern California Pilot Takes Post In National League

By the Associated Press.

Palm Springs, Calif., Dec. 27.—George (Dick) Richards, owner of the Detroit Lions, professional football team of the National League, announced tonight the appointment of Elmer (Gus) Henderson of Los Angeles as coach of the Detroit team.

Henderson, coach of the Los Angeles Bulldogs since 1936, succeeds Earl (Dutch) Clark, who recently resigned as coach of the Lions.

Henderson took over the Los Angeles Bulldog organization three years ago and brought it to the top as one of the best independent teams in the Nation.

Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other National League teams fell before the Bulldogs this fall as many of the Henderson-developed stars went through an undefeated home season and a successful invasion of Eastern pro gridirons.

Henderson left the head coaching job at Tulsa University to come here with the Bulldogs, and prior to that was credited with starting the University of Southern California toward the forefront of leading college elevens during his regime there from 1919 until he was succeeded in 1925 by Howard Jones.

"Gus" Henderson has been a four-time visitor to Washington with his University of Tulsa teams who annually played George Washington University until their rivalry was terminated two years ago.

Henderson's Tulsa teams were famed for their wide-open style of play and defeated the Colonials in three successive years.

Two years ago he retired as the Tulsa coach to accept the post as coach of the Los Angeles Bulldogs, a professional team. Henderson's Bulldogs have defeated National Football League teams in exhibition games, and next month at Los Angeles Henderson will share coaching duties with Ray Flaherty in charge of an All-Star pro squad which will meet the champion New York Giants.

Rivals Train In Secrecy Henceforth

California Backers Offer Seven Points; Trojans Are Given Grueling Workout

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 27.—The curtain of secrecy was drawn around the battle plans of Duke and Southern California tonight after the rival Rose Bowl football foes went through their last semipublic practice.

Visiting football writers from the North Carolina sector took a final peep at the Southern California team and came away deeply impressed with the size—the outfit averages 195 pounds—and the speed of Howard Jones' Trojans.

The California delegation likewise spent the afternoon watching the Dukes, and voted unanimously that one thing was certain when the two teams come together next Monday, namely, that the iron Dukes are going to be mighty tough to push around.

Whereas a week ago many backers of Troy were yelping for a decision by at least 14 points, most of them today will be thoroughly satisfied with 7.

The seventh point, it might be added, seems most important because the Dukes have a big fellow named Tony Ruffa, a substitute guard, who displayed a marked adeptitude in booting conversions.

"That will be enough," called out Coach Wade.

"That will be too much," chorused the Trojan faction.

Apparently still satisfied with his eleven, Howard Jones again put the Trojans through a stiff drill, but ordered no actual scrimmage. The last time the team went through this type of work was several days before the Notre Dame game December 3.

Tomorrow no spectators will be admitted into the workouts of either team. Both Jones and Wade plan at least one workout in the Rose Bowl, but nothing definite has been decided.

Powell Wins In Carnival

Youthful athletes of Powell Boys Club dominated the first annual sports carnival for boys last night at Tech gymnasium. They tallied a total of 55 points, better than the scores of the next three teams combined. Roosevelt Boys Club was second, with 13 points, and Washington Boys Club was third, with 10 points. The Harry English Gold Trophy went to the winner.

Cold weather and a lack of transportation limited the turnout of both athletes and spectators, but the proceedings were a complete success as far as Powell was concerned. Paced by Teddy Grim, John Fanning and his brother, Ray, and Eddie Crandall and Dan Hoadley, Powell took first place in 9 of the 20 events, producing a finisher among the first three in almost all events.

85-lb. basketball free throw—Won by Al Thompson (Geo. B. C.); Benny Rodill (Geo. B. C.), second; Sabatine Deleonibus (Langley), third. Six out of ten tries.

115-lb. basketball free throw—Won by Earl Elliott (Devitt B. C.); Larry Mater (Langley B. C.), second; Francis Murray (Langley), third. Eight out of ten tries.

135-lb. basketball throw—Won by John Placos (Anacostia B. C.); Joe Barth (Powell B. C.), second; Richard Brown (Langley B. C.), third. Nine out of ten tries. (Note—Placos made 19 straight throws.)

Unlimited basketball throw—Won by Shirley Clark (Anacostia B. C.); Aaron Silverman (Powell B. C.), second; Benny Harrell (Langley B. C.), third. Nine out of ten tries.

Central C Club To Meet Friday

The Graduate Central "C" Club will hold a meeting Friday night at 8:30 o'clock at the Cairo Hotel, Sixteenth and Q street northwest. All undergraduate club members are invited.

Features of the get together will be presentation of gold footballs to the Central team which won the interhigh football championship and an address by Lieut. William R. Kane who, in 1933, won sword Navy presents annually to the outstanding athlete in school.

Transparenti Scalzo Foe

Lew Transparenti, youngest of the fighting Transparenti brothers of Baltimore, last night penned his fine old Italian name to articles for a 10-round bout with Petey Scalzo Tuesday night which will usher in the new year at Turner's Arena.

Scalzo, now recognized as the outstanding claimant to the world featherweight championship following his two-round knockout over Joey Archibald, signed for the fight several weeks ago. He will receive one of highest guarantees ever paid by the local fisticuffing firm.

Transparenti, a youngster with a paralyzing punch in his right mitten, has been in Baltimore and Philadelphia where he has earned an enviable reputation. He not only figures to make a good fight against Scalzo, but stands an excellent chance to win. All he needs is one good punch with the right to put Mr. Scalzo where the latter put Archibald.

Hardwick Sent to Sea

Annapolis, Dec. 27.—Lieut. Harry (Hank) Hardwick, head coach of Navy football for the past two seasons, and who, at his own request, was not considered for the position next season, has received orders detaching him from the Naval Academy and directing him to report for duty with the Asiatic Fleet.

Hardwick has been ordered to report at San Francisco by February 10, when he will embark for Shanghai, where he will be stationed.

Seeded Players Win in Girls' Indoor Tennis

Cissy Madden, of Boston, seeded No. 2, easily defeated Betty Thompson, of Gardner, 6—0, 6—1. Results of other first-round matches were:

Caroline Cook, Newton, defeated Martha Elliott, Wellesley, default; Mary Keyes, Winchester, defeated Betty Lanares, Brookline, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4; Dorothy Wightman, Brookline, defeated Priscilla Tapley, Winchester, 6—4, 6—1.

Philadelphia Gets '39 Open

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—The 1939 National Open golf championship probably will be played on a par 69 course for the first time in history, Melville Curtis, chairman of the Philadelphia Country Club golf committee, said today.

The change from par 71 must be approved by the United States Golf Association before it will become effective, Curtis said.

Par on two holes—the 479-yard eighth and the 480-yard twelfth—on the club's Spring Mill course, where the open will be played next June, have been changed from 5 to 4, thus lowering par by two strokes.

Cuddy Selects Blue Devils To Upset Trojans in Bowl

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Dec. 27.—Picking the bowl winners—maybe:

This is the festive holiday period. One can be very silly during these joyous days, and get away with it. Like the persons unknown who sent lace panties and rubber diapers to prominent grid performers. Hence, if I'm wrong in my selections I'll claim "King's X" and place the blame on the holidays.

You can appreciate this proviso after reading my first pick. I am revealing herewith—and at long last—my secret belief that Duke will beat Southern California in the Rose Bowl next Monday. I make this choice with Duke the 2-1 underdog.

As I recall, Duke is the outfit that came through a tough nine-game schedule unbeaten, untied and unscored upon. It completed its season by turning back mighty Pittsburgh, 7-0. The Blue Devils from Durham, N. C., registered 114 points while their opponents merely clicked off nine goose eggs. They have the best defensive record of any major college eleven in the land.

I think the Southern Cal. team will be surprised considerably when its encounters these Carolinians at Pasadena Monday.

Shifting down to the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, we come to the hardest game to pick, the Texas Christian-Carnegie Tech brawl. I must string along with T. C. U., because I believe that Messrs. Davey O'Brien, Ky Aldrich, I. B. Hale, etc., have the more dangerous scoring machine. The Texas Horned Frogs ran up a total of 254 points against 53 for the opposition, while coming through ten games unbeaten and untied. Meanwhile, the Carnegie Skibos registered 170 points against 49 in eight contests. Carnegie lost only to Notre Dame, after the third-down incident.

For the Orange Bowl game at Miami, Fla., I must pick Tennessee over Oklahoma, although each outfit came through a ten-game schedule unbeaten and untied. Also there were surprisingly few points registered against each by opponents. The Tennessee Volunteers, apparently one of the strongest elevens developed in the deep South in the last decade, rolled up 276 points to 16 for the opposition. Meanwhile, the Sooners, whom many of the experts still regard as a mystery team, registered 185 against 12. Tennessee is the 14-5 favorite.

Invitation Table Tennis Tourney Starts Today

The Washington Table Tennis Club's annual invitation tournament will get under way tonight at 8 o'clock on the club courts at 1305 E street, with most of the city's outstanding paddlers scheduled to compete. Preliminary matches will be disposed of tonight and semifinals and the championship matches will hold the spotlight tomorrow.

Elias Shuman, city champion, and Jack Lee, who had Shuman at match point six times in a tournament last week, top the entry list.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

New York, Dec. 27.—For the fourth time the members of our profession have been asked to vote on the immortals of the national game. already nine men who made baseball history and wrote their names across its pages have been selected by the centennial committee, for next year baseball celebrates its one hundredth anniversary at Cooperstown, N. Y.

VIDMER.

At that time the Hall of Fame will be dedicated, the plaques of those who have been chosen will be unveiled. But there still is time to add others to the nine men already honored—Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson, Larry Lajoie, Tris Speaker, Cy Young, and Grover Cleveland Alexander. The members of our craft have been asked to ballot again.

In fact they will be asked to ballot each year with ten names on each ballot. However, there are rules and regulations which keep the members of the hall of fame a very exclusive set. To be elected a player must receive 75 per cent of the votes cast. Last year out of 262 ballots, only one man achieved that total—Alexander. This may seem surprising until you pause to consider the number of great stars who have shone on big league diamonds since the turn of the century, and only those who have played since 1900 are eligible, only those whose playing careers came to an end before the 1938 season started.

George Sisler, Wee Willie Keeler, Rube Waddell, Frank Chance, Ed Delehanty, Ed Walsh, Johnny Evers, Jimmy Collins, Rabbit Maranville, Roger Bresnahan, Fred Clarke, Mordecai Brown, Ray Schalk, Ross Youngs, Eddie Plank, Chief Bender, Johnny Kling, Hugh Duffy, Hugh Jennings, Addie Joss, Joe Tinker, Harry Heilman, Nap Rucker, Babe Adams, Sam Crawford, Rube Marquard, Dazzy Vance, Edd Roush—these are only a few of the scores of players who deserve consideration. Yet, though it may seem at a glance that the ten most deserving certainly should be in this list, my own ten votes will be cast for others.

I have no idea that the ten men on my ballot will be elected, or even that they will receive the most votes, and undoubtedly there will be vehement disagreement from the fans. There always is in a case of this kind. But anyway, here are my choices, not necessarily in the order mentioned. After all each one receives one vote no matter where his name appears on each list.

Rogers Hornsby. There are certain black marks against the Rajah's personal habits. He bet on race horses. He talked back to his bosses. He spoke his own mind on every subject without ever a thought for tact or diplomacy. He didn't save his money while he was making it. But these have nothing to do with his contributions to baseball.

Miller Huggins. The Little Miller was never a great player. He was a fair fielding second baseman in his day, and a rather light hitter. But on his managerial accomplishments it seems to me he deserves recognition. He took the New York Yankees when they were a perennial second-division outfit, reconstructed them, rebuilt them, reorganized them and led them to six pennants in the short span of eight seasons.

Frank Baker. The called him the home run king before Babe Ruth loomed over the horizon. He was the slugger of his day, although the records he compiled seem somewhat unimportant in the light of later deeds. And in addition he was one of the best defensive third basemen of the ages, a member of the $100,000 infield of his day.

Clark Griffith. This may bring a gasp of surprise, but the Old Fox has done everything a man can do in baseball, done them all well and gained the respect and admiration of everyone who follows the game.

As a pitcher he was outstanding, although it is doubtful if he should reach the hall of fame on his pitching alone. As a manager he was successful, winning the first American League pennant race with the Chicago White Sox in 1901. As a president and club owner he has achieved distinction, although it is improbable that anyone belongs with the immortals who has been only a president and owner, but adding up his record in all three departments of the game, it seems to me that Clark Griffith belongs with the great.

Frank Frisch. This is the first time that Frisch has been eligible, but now that his brilliant and successful career has come to an end, I don't think anyone will hesitate to place his name among the standouts of the game. A great player, a great fielder, a great hitter, a successful manager and one of the best competitors that baseball ever has known.

Herb Pennock. One of the first figures the majors ever produced. One of the greatest left-handed pitchers of them all. No explanations seem necessary for placing his name on the list. Bill Terry. As a leader of the Giants he has been specially distinguished, having taken a seventh place club and in six years won three pennants, finished second once, third twice. But even without his accomplishments as a leader, he would rate the royal recognition as player alone.

Joe Wood. They called him Smokey Joe and he was the ace of a Boston pitching staff that was winning pennants with great regularity from 20 to 25 years ago.

Georgetown Wins in Post Trophy Play

105-Lb. Team Beats Southeast Branch in Elimination Event; Alexandria Wins

A good percentage of the 51 basketball teams entered in the fifth consecutive renewal of the Boys Club of Washington basketball elimination tournament got into action yesterday on the courts of Central and Southeast branches. The 105-pound basketeers held sway in the morning and the 120-pounders in the afternoon. The night sessions featured lads of 135 pounds, the weight division in which The Washington Post annually donates a large trophy to the winner.

Georgetown Branch proved the class of the 105-pounders, banging out a wide 28-9 margin over a hard-fighting crew from the Southeast Branch. Pullman, diminutive forward, led the triumph, marking up 11 pointers. Hollihan, of the losers, was the only one on the team to score more than two points. He scored three.

In the 120-pound section, an invading band of Alexandria Boys Club players smote down the local Y. M. C. A. Eagles, 25-16. It was a fast, thrilling contest, Alexandria finally winning through the combined scoring efforts of Forward Thomas and Center Dudley. Another 120-pound tilt, between Sacred Heart boys and the Central Branch Americans, ended with the Boys Club in possession of a one-sided victory. The score was 24-8, only three Sacred Heart performers able to tally at all.

The 120-pound battles scheduled for the Central Branch gym were not played because of forfeits. The John Q. Adams team forfeited to the Georgetown team in that department, and Langley Boys Club took a forfeit over the Stanton Aces.

Seven games and a forfeit marked action in the 135-pound class with the Democrats nosing out the Alexandria five, 22-21, in the most exciting fray. The Northeast Streaks failed to make appearance for their battle with the Stewart Brothers Photographers.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Central Branch Gymnasium (230 C Street N.W.)

90-pound class—4 p. m., Merrick Boys' Club vs. Southeast Branch.

120-pound class—11 a. m., Merrick Boys' Club vs. Georgetown Branch; 1 p. m., Central Branch Americans vs. Powell Boys' Club; 2 p. m., Southeast Branch vs. Alexandria Boys' Club; 3 p. m., Northeast Branch Cardinals vs. Stanton Aces.

135-pound class—7 p. m., Young Democrats vs. Central Branch Fleetwings.

Unlimited class—8 p. m., Georgetown Branch vs. Central Branch Varsity; 9 p. m., Alexandria Boys' Club vs. Northeast Branch Big Five; 1 p. m., Merrick Boys' Club "B" vs. Southeast Branch.

Chambers Five Bows

Rens Down District Tossers by 44-31 In Fast Finish

Caging six baskets, and counting one point by the foul route, Bill Gates, who went in for "Tarzan" Cooper, of the Renaissance five, in the final period of play against the W. W. Chambers quintet last night at the Heurich gymnasium, made these 13 points the final margin of a 44-to-31 victory for the fast-stepping sepia aggregation.

The Chambers five led at the start, Goldfadden leading the way to a 14-to-12 count at the end of the first 15-minute period. But the Rens drew away as the second period began, "Fats" Jenkins starting the uphill offensive with an overhand shot that thrilled the crowd, while Isaacs drew a foul from Cabell's interference and Cooper another when he and Jake Goldfadden tied things up in midcourt.

"Bruiser" Snitch followed with a long looper, to set the Rens in front, 20 to 14. A beautiful birdie by "Eb" Russell, followed by "Red" Chilcotte's cager from pivot, fell short of regaining the lead for Chambers. The Rens then yielded to the demand of the crowd for an exhibition of speed and called in Gates, an unknown quantity, whose six baskets from various angles of the court and two foul shots were made while Burrell and Russell vainly tried to stem the tide.

In the preliminary, the Alpha Phi Fraternity quintet defeated the "Y" Trojans, 36 to 28. "Slim Thompson and Pree were the individual stars of the game.

Davis Meets Jim Wright

Villain Will Grapple In 30-Minute Event At Arena Tomorrow

Karl Davis, the belligerent husky, who seems destined to smash all existing records for unpopularity at the Arena, last night signed for a 30-minute preliminary duel with Jim Wright on tomorrow night's bargain bill.

This is one of several preliminaries booked in support of the featured Golden Terror—Chief Chewaki shindig—and virtually guarantees the customers full value for their money. If there is an illegal hold Davis has not used he'd like to hear about it. Thus far he has mangled, strangled and trampled three opponents, and probably will acquit himself in like manner tomorrow night.

Davis lost on a foul to Chief Little Wolf last week, and the week before was defeated by Tommy O'Toole in the finals of a one-night elimination tournament after wading through a star-studded field. He is easily one of the ablest gladiators in the game, but seems unable to bring himself to wrestle cleanly.

Both O'Toole, who scored a hit with the fans, and Little Wolf are on tomorrow night's program. The handsome young Celt meets Hank Metheny, the bald bad man, and the Indian is booked with Red Ryan. O'Toole undoubtedly is headed for stardom. He handles himself nicely in action, and against Jim Londos adequately demonstrated his ability to absorb punishment. He lost to Londos when he toppled from the ring and was unable to continue.

Dutch Schultz, whose gaudy silken robe, waxed mustache, red shoes and closely cropped head lend a satanic air to his person, will engage Frank Brown in another 30-minute preliminary duel.

Admission prices have been cut in half by the promoter as somewhat of a holiday offering to his customers.

Local Pros Meet Troy

Enthused over their 36 to 33 defeat of Wilkes-Barre's Barons and convinced they gradually are rounding into stride in American Basketball League play, Washington Heurich Brewers visit Troy, N. Y., tonight for a game with Troy's Haymakers.

This looms as a severe test for the Brewers who were decisively defeated in a previous engagement with Troy on the home court, 38 to 19.

Immediately after tonight's game the local boys will speed back to Washington to start preparation for two of their most important American League tests.

On Sunday night in Heurich gymnasium at 9 o'clock Kingston Colonials, last year operating under the sponsorship of Kate Smith's Celtics, will be entertained. Next Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Brooklyn's Visitations, one of professional basketball's outstanding attractions, are to appear here.

Heurich League To Replay Games

After a spirited meeting in Heurich's business office last night, it was decided to throw out all games played in Heurich Basketball League play thus far and replay the complete schedule.

First half play in the revised schedule is to get under way Sunday night in a preliminary to the professional game bringing together Washington Heurich Brewers and Kingston Colonials.

The decision to replay the split schedule was reached when the action of the District Amateur Athletic Union, whereby Waverly Wheeler and Cliff Keyser, Delaware and Hudson players, were banned on charges of professionalism, was upheld by the Heurich league.

Charlie Malone Signs Redskins' Contract for 1939

Charlie Malone, 6-foot, 4-inch end, formally became a member of the 1939 Redskins yesterday when he signed a contract for next season. With the exception of Sammy Baugh, whose three-year contract does not expire until the end of the 1940 season, Malone is the first member of the Redskins to sign for next year.

Redskin officials did not divulge Malone's salary terms. The elongated end, who has been a member of the Redskin squad for five years, following his graduation from Texas A. and M., ranked fourth among the league's pass catchers during the 1938 season.

Malone, who makes his home in Washington, is now affiliated with an insurance firm.

On Fishing

The recently released figures of the United States Bureau of Census for the year 1937 on the production of athletic goods and sporting equipment are really astonishing.

And, although we knew fishing tackle to be close to the top, no idea that it had increased 42 per cent over the total production for the year 1935. The actual value in dollars and cents . . . $7,581,662 in 1935 and $10,875,490 in 1937. Just exactly one-fourth of the grand total of the value of all sporting and athletic goods produced in the United States in 1937.

ACKERMAN.

Breaking the production of fishing tackle down for the quantity and value of the various items we find there were 1,059,280 bamboo and wood rods manufactured having a value of $2,253,292, and 1,019,378 steel rods worth $1,197,200, a total for the two of $3,450,492, or a value of $100,000 more than the total of all baseball goods produced during the same year.

Two million, three hundred ninety-one thousand eight hundred eighty-seven reels valued at $3,357,566, rod mountings to the tune of $386,510, hooks of all varieties for another $734,869, artificial lures going into seven figures for $1,688,982, leaders, swivels and sinkers $570,160, and other equipment not reported by kind, $686,911. This does not include fishing line which is reported under the manufacture of line and twine, and of which we have no record for this year.

In 1935 the production of golf goods led the field, and fishing tackle by nearly $3,000,000. The increase for 1937 was only about 1 per cent less than the increase in fishing tackle. The total value being $13,760,337.

The big difference in these outdoor pursuits is not the first cost, but the second. Where the one can be enjoyed for a very reasonable daily cost, the other gets up into real money. It has been estimated by the State of New Jersey, that the million anglers that fish her bays and beaches spend on an average of $5 each day. In the Chesapeake Bay area, we would say the half a million fishermen, coming from as far as Pittsburgh and northern West Virginia, spend slightly more than $5 each day. In southern Florida, the more than 100,000 entrants in last year's Greater Miami Fishing Tournament spent nearly $10 each day they fished in the competition. The sport of angling there is second only to the hotel business.

Different States in placing the amount spent each day by visiting anglers vary from $2 to as much as $15. In different sections the amount spent yearly is estimated from $63 to $87 for each angler. So when you consider that one out of every four persons is an angler of sorts, that is, he goes fishing at least once during the season, one out of every five goes two or more times, and out of each ten there is one who as an angler takes his sport so seriously that he is pursuing it at every opportunity, it can better be understood how far our sport has advanced since 1933, when the return from sports anglers was estimated to be $115,000,000 on the North Atlantic Coast alone, or $15,000,000 more than the total value of the commercial fisheries for the same area in the same year.

Comparison of figures, and with other sports, could go on indefinitely, so we'll just wind up with . . . the latest available figures show salt water fishing to be the first ranking participation sport in the United States.

All details of the world's biggest competitive fishing contest, the Metropolitan Miami fishing tournament have been completed, committees set up, and the limits of the area decided upon. The actual fishing will get under way nearly a week earlier than was first planned, with the marine pageant on Sunday January 1, and not come to an end until April 18, 99 days of real action, and some suspense for those who happen to take early in the contest a large specimen of some one of the 30 species of sport fish for which prizes are listed.

In addition to the 100 grand prizes, there will be daily, weekly and monthly awards, as well as other specific and appropriate prizes. There is to be a three-day competitive team event, made up of anglers representing New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Metropolitan Miami, and other cities that may choose to enter. This event is to be decided on a point system by a special committee.

In order to encourage the use of light tackle Outdoor Life Magazine will present a handsome plaque to the angler turning in the outstanding feat of the tournament. Determination of this will be by a special committee headed by Phillip Wylie, the novelist. With him will be Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse," Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president of the Flying Fishermen's Club, Gene Byrnes, cartoonist, Charles Baker, jr., author and editor, Tommy Aiken, angling editor of utdoor Life, and Don McCarthy of the Miami Rod and Reel Club.

With everyone visiting southern Florida feeling as though a trip would be lost were it not for one or two days spent on the blue waters of the Gulf Stream, there is every likelihood that this year's contest will go far ahead of the record breaker of 1938. No entrance fees . . . Rod and Reel Club headquarters . . . all fish not wanted to be turned over on ice to the Salvation Army. What more could any dyed in the wool angler ask for?

McLarnin Comeback?

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 27 (AP).—Jimmy McLarnin, the former welterweight boxing champion, isn't saying anything about reports he will make a comeback against Henry Armstrong next summer, but close friends claim "Baby Face" is doing a little training. Prospects are bright for a comeback if the price is right—about $50,000.

Floragina Downed by Half Length

Meade Given Another Winner in 4th as Stewards Disqualify Winning Lassator

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 27.—Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Roar, a very fast sprinter that frequently falters when looked in the eye, stuck it out in gamer-than-usual fashion to win the Key West Purse, 6-furlong top attraction here this afternoon. The recently reinstated Don Meade drove the 3-year-old gelding over the wire by a half length. It was Meade's second straight score, he having wor the previous contest through a disqualification.

Roar, paying $8.40, made the fastest time of the meeting when he completed his journey in 1:10 3-5. E. C. Roth's heavily backed Floragina, another that is rated a front runner, was outlasted by the winner while saving second money by a length from the sluggish starting No Sir, representing the Joseph Pepp barn.

Meade had Roar away well from the inside. The former E. R. Bradley contract rider hustled his mount into a length-and-a-half advantage while racing Little Shaver into submission. Floragina then took up the chase. The Gino filly looked like a winner when she collared Roar entering the short stretch. However, Meade put up one of his old-time finishes and Roar came again as Floragina found the task slightly too much for her. No Sir reached contention around the bend. He was gaining steadily at the end.

The first disqualification of the meeting materialized with the running of the fourth race. After the long-shot Lassator had finished a half length in advance of the favored Hi Cliff, his number was taken down. The stewards interviewed both riders before taking action. Earl Steffen, who rode Lassator, was suspended for the balance of the meeting. Strangely enough, this was his first mount of the season. Don Meade had Hi Cliff fighting it out with Lassator at the end of the stretch when the latter, on the outside, came in and blocked the favorite. Hi Cliff Paid $5.70. Count Valiant was moved up to second place and Donna Leona to third.

Eddie Arcaro, pace-setting jockey at the meeting, who took a two-day vacation over Sunday and Monday, lost no time returning to the winners' circle in the first event. Replacing the slightly injured Charlie Rollins astride Milk, Eddie guided the mare over the finish line with two lengths to spare. Tzigane and Dead Ready, a pair of long shots, were next in line as named, a half length apart. Milk, an $8.80-for-$2 chance, raced forwardly from the start, wore down Dead Ready in the stretch and easily sped into the clear. She finished the 6 furlongs in 1:12 4-5.

Smith's Tavern Stops Mt. Rainier League

Smith's Tavern entrenched itself more securely in the lead of the Mount Rainier Bowling League last night by sweeping a set from the second place Mayor and Council team at Mount Rainier alleys. J. Barnholt led the winners with 144, 385. Smart rolled 342 for the losers. Smith's high game was 624, and its set 1,772.

Jimmy's Restaurant took two games from Saur's Super Service, but J. O'Connell, of Jimmy's, took high individual honors with a game of 146.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MILK, $8.80, $5.00, $4.30; TZIGANE, $34.50, $18.70; DEAD READY, $23.50.

MILK, going well up under light restraint until straightened into the stretch, came around the leaders and drew away when ready, to win handily. TZIGANE gradually improved his position while saving ground and outlasted DEAD READY in the final drive. DEAD READY displayed the most speed, but came slightly wide into the stretch and faltered. MAEVIX, strongly urged all the way, had no excuses. FLY ME closed a big gap. REBEKHA was never prominent.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:30. Off 2:31. Winner, E. J. Regan's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADDIS, $7.20, $5.70, $4.40; HI-GINNY, $31.90, $10.60; TAKUS, $3.10.

ADDIS, going prominently in the early stages, swung around the leaders leaving the backstretch, assumed command with little effort and won as his rider pleased. HI-GINNY improved his position gradually on the outside and wore TAKUS down in the last strides. TAKUS got going quickly, displayed the most speed, but hung in the final drive. MANEUVER had no mishaps. SUNSET GIRL lacked speed. BLUE GROTTO, well up for three furlongs, stopped badly the remainder of the trip.

Daily Double, Milk and Addis, Paid $38.70.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:56. Off 2:57. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUASIMODO, $2.50, $2.50, $2.20; NOEL H., $3.50, $2.40; PORDINA, $2.40.

QUASIMODO, easily the best, shook off his opposition at his leisure, drew steadily clear rounding the turn to win with speed in reserve. NOEL H., hard ridden and saving much ground the entire trip, disposed of PORDINA in the stretch run. PORDINA, quickest away, displayed speed and went in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, but faltered in the final drive. RUSHAWAY, outrun early, finished with a belated rush.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:22. Off 3:25½. Winner, Mrs. L. M. Greene's ch. c. *Disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HI CLIFF, $5.70, $4.00, $3.30; COUNT VALIANT, $19.60, $9.60; DONNA LEONA, $6.80.

LASSATOR forced a steady pace from the start, raced MIGHTY SWEET into defeat, took command on the stretch turn, where he cut across and blocked HI CLIFF, for which he was disqualified. HI CLIFF, in tight quarters in the early stages, moved up gamely on the inside rounding the turn, was going to the front when blocked and raced as if the best. COUNT VALIANT broke a trifle slow, worked his way into contention on the outside and closed going strong. DONNA LEONA broke forwardly, came across the field in the run down the backstretch and caused several horses to pull up, then faltered in the stretch. LADY INFINITE, troubled early, made up a lot of ground. SCOTCH HIGH finished well.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:52. Off 3:56. Winner, Mrs. C. S. Bromley's b. g. (3), by Dis Done—Panasette. Trained by L. P. Harlan. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46 1-5, 1:10 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROAR, $8.40, $4.40, $3.00; FLORAGINA, $3.60, $2.80; NO SIR, $2.90.

ROAR, hustled to the front, set a swift pace and withstood repeated challenges from his opposition in the early running and won going away. FLORAGINA moved up menacingly on the inside coming into the stretch, but, hung in the final 60 yards. NO SIR, slow to settle into his stride, moved up steadily while going wide in the last quarter mile, but could not overtake the leaders. RISSA, hard ridden the entire trip raced evenly. LITTLE SHAVER stopped badly after showing speed for a half mile. BROWN MOTH broke very slowly.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:22. Off 4:26. Winner, C. E. Hudson's ch. g. (2), by Hallucination—Voila. Trained by S. D. Hudson. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUGGED RED, $23.20, $11.00, $9.00; JEST ONCE, $6.30, $5.30; BUCK BENNY, $12.40.

RUGGED RED gradually bettered his position on the outside in the final half mile, took command midway around the lower turn and held away the remainder of the trip. JEST ONCE, vigorously ridden, worked her way up on the outside and gradually wore BUCK BENNY down. BUCK BENNY, a forward factor all the way, held on well in the stretch drive. STEPACOLA raced evenly. TAUT broke alertly, showed speed, but retired in the final quarter mile. GRAPEVINE ran out.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:42. Off 4:32½. Winner, A. Sprow's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIRDLEA, $5.10, $3.20, $2.30; PRINCE DEREK, $4.20, $2.50; ENDYMION, $2.40.

BIRDLEA, eased off the pace and steadied behind the leaders to the stretch turn, swung to the outside, responded courageously when the final test came and wore the leaders down in the last 30 yards to win going away. PRINCE DEREK, rushed around the leaders leaving the backstretch, took command at the furlong pole, but was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. ENDYMION, whipped to the front, set a fast pace while saving ground for six furlongs and held on better than usual in the stretch drive. BEWITCHED showed early foot, but stopped badly after going half mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE SPLENDOR, $10.40, $7.50, $6.20; ABBATORO, $11.70, $6.10; GALLOPING, $4.50.

PRINCE SPLENDOR, going forwardly under light restraint in the early stages, raced TOBY TYLER into submission rounding the last turn, drew clear through the stretch, but faltered and was under energetic pressure at the end. He pulled up lame. ABBATORO worked his way forwardly on the outside, finished gamely and was wearing the winner down at the finish. GALLOPING, keen contender all the way, came out entering the stretch and outlasted EMIR in the final drive. EMIR was unable to obtain ample racing room early, moved up stoutly coming into the stretch, but again suffered interference. CONTINUITY met with repeated minor trouble.

Contracts Stand On New Cubs

Chicago, Dec. 27 (U.P.).—The Chicago Cubs announced today they had taken over the 1939 contracts signed by Shortstop Dick Bartell and Catcher Gus Mancuso before they were traded by the New York Giants to the Cubs.

Outfielder Hank Leiber, third man obtained by the Cubs in the deal which sent Shortstop Bill Jurges, Catcher Ken O'Dea and Outfielder Frank Demaree to New York, has not signed his contract yet.

St. Peter's Bowlers In Sweepstakes

A mass assault on duckpins is scheduled tomorrow night at the Queen Pin drives where the 14 teams of St. Peter's Church competing in the Holy Name League, will stage their sixth annual Christmas sweepstakes. Action starts at 7:30 o'clock.

Harry Brown, who teamed with Ollie Pacini to win the doubles last year, will bowl from scratch, but full handicaps will be allowed all other entrants. Brown currently is carrying a 122 average in league competition. Pacini boasts a 120 average.

Jack Hassett, victor in the singles last winter, and Tom Graves, winner of the all-events trophy, will defend their titles.

Tennessee YMCA Group Visits Here

A delegation of youngsters from the Knoxville, Tenn., Y. M. C. A. will visit the Central Y. M. C. A. here tomorrow, Friday and Saturday to compete in a basketball game and a swimming meet with the Washington boys and to be guests of junior gym leaders of the older boys' council of the "Y" at a banquet Friday night and sight-seeing tours Saturday.

The basketball game between senior boys will be tomorrow at 7:30 p. m., and a second game will be played by junior boys at 4:30 p. m. Friday. The swimming meet will precede the banquet Friday at 6:30 p. m.

Investment Banking Firm Changes Name

Brown Harriman & Co. To Become Harriman Ripley & Co.

New York, Dec. 27.—Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., investment bankers, will be known as Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., effective January 1, it was announced today by Joseph P. Riley, president.

The primary reason for the change lies in the occasional confusion created by the similarity of its old name with that of the private firm of Brown Brothers Harriman & Co., which is one of the oldest commercial banking firms in the country. The new name Harriman Ripley & Co., Inc., will better serve to distinguish the corporation from other concerns and to establish its individuality. There will be no change in ownership of the corporation, and, except for the change of name, it will continue as in the past in the investment banking business as an underwriter of capital issues and as a dealer in United States Government, State, county and municipal bonds, and in public utility, railroad, industrial and other investment securities.

The principal offices of the corporation are located in New York City, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago, with branches or direct representation in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Hartford, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Pittsburgh, Providence, Reading, San Francisco, Syracuse, Washington and other leading cities. In Europe its correspondents are Brown Harriman & Co., Ltd., a British corporation with headquarters in London.

Ripley Harriman Associate

Joseph P. Ripley has headed Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., since it commenced business in June, 1934. He first became associated with W. Averall Harriman and E. Rowland Harriman about 17 years ago, when he joined the investment house of W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc. Subsequently he was with the National City Co. as vice president and later

Overseas Trade Registers Drop For November

The Commerce Department reported yesterday declines in exports and imports for November. Exports, including re-exports, dropped to $252,231,000 in November, from $277,919,000 in October. They were $14,697,000 in November, 1937.

General imports totaled $178,181,000 in November, compared with $177,979,000 in October and $223,090,000 in November, 1937.

Sizable gains were scored in November in exports of automobiles, iron and steel semimanufactures, particularly scrap. Exports of raw cotton increased slightly.

Among principal imports, increases were recorded in November for raw silk, coffee, whisky and wood pulp, while decreases were shown for cane sugar, edible nuts, undressed furs, fertilizers and works of art.

The Nation's export trade in the first 11 months of 1938 was somewhat larger in volume than in the like period of 1937, despite the downturn that developed after April.

Granby Mining Votes 15-Cent Dividend

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Directors of Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting & Power Co. today declared a dividend of 15 cents on capital stock, payable February 1 to holders of record January 16.

The dividend is the first since 1936, when a total of $10 a share was disbursed in liquidating dividends on the old $100-par stock, since exchanged on a share-for-share basis for the present $5-par capital stock. The exchange was made following decision of directors to terminate a voluntary dissolution plan. Company's properties are in British Columbia.

Lack Snow Covering A Cent a Bushel Gain Corn Prices Higher

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Likelihood of damage to winter crops that have not had necessary snow covering to protect them from sudden Arctic temperature hoisted wheat 1 cent today.

Tending also to push prices up were reports of increased European political tension, especially word that Italy was massing troops on the frontier of French Somaliland. Other stimulating factors included advices of violent winds carrying dust over portions of Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma.

A restraining influence, however, was talk that ill effects on crops could not be determined at present, and that growth conditions in the spring must be awaited to estimate losses, if any.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅜@⅝ higher compared with Saturday's finish, May 68⅛@68, July 67¾@67⅝; corn ⅛@¼ up, May 52¼@52⅜, July 53⅜@53½; oats ¼@⅜ advance; rye ⅛@⅝ bulge, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents down.

Retail Advertising Continues Gains

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Retail display advertising for the week ended December 17 continued its trend toward improvement when it came within 1.6 per cent of equaling the record for the corresponding week of last year the smallest loss percentage shown since April 2, and the third smallest loss for any weekly period of this year, according to a report released here today by Advertising Age.

Eighty major markets are tabulated by this report which shows a total of 30,625,845 lines for the week reported, against 31,135,241 lines for the compared 1937 week.

Prices Dip at Close After Steady Day Statement of Eccles a Factor in Trading Railroad Bonds Lower, Others Irregular

New York, Dec. 27.—Stocks started the day with a steady tone but belated selling for tax purposes contributed to later irregularity and the list ended the session off 0.44 point on the average. Those who buy stocks on every hint of inflation had for their consideration over the week-end the letter of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, in which he attacked the recommendations for economy and retrenchment propounded by Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia.

There was a day when every hint of inflation was marked by investors rushing into stocks, particularly those of companies carrying big inventories of commodities, in the belief that this might be one way to ward off the evils of a great depreciation of the currency. There is not the same excitement on these matters nowadays, although the threat of inflation and depreciated currency is ever present while the Administration refuses to balance its budget.

Eccles and Congress

One interpretation of the quiet manner in which the market took Mr. Eccles' letter is that investors wisely concluded that what the chairman of the Federal Reserve System may regard as sound economics is almost certainly at variance with what Congress may decide to do. Fortunately for the country, the new Congress, following the last election, will doubtless contain sufficient sanity to stop the country's headlong rush to bankruptcy.

Several individuals in Wall Street read with interest today a study by the National Industrial Conference Board, and wished Mr. Eccles had read it also, in which it was demonstrated that whereas the standard of living has been falling in this country during the period of New Deal spending it has been rising in England, yet the increase in the per capita debt in England has been negligible compared with our own.

In any event suggestions for more prolific spending made by the chairman did nothing to help today's market and a far more potent factor in shaping the day's trend was the regular year-end run-of-the-mill selling for tax purposes. Rail shares, which behaved well before the extended week-end, on the prospect of legislative action to help the carriers bear their burdens, turned irregular with the balance of the list.

Aircraft Shares Yield

Even the aviation shares, buoyed for a time by the authoritative stories from Washington to the effect that the President wishes to enlarge the air forces of the army and navy by 10,000 planes, gave up most of their gains and several leaders in the group closed lower. All groups had minus signs predominating. Curtiss Wright and Bendix, the most active aviations, closed with small gains, but losses were sustained by Douglas and Sperry. General Motors was down nearly a point Chrysler slightly more than a point. Commonwealth & Southern was the day's most active issue and closed unchanged. Northern Pacific and New York Central were prominent in the rail division and were little changed, but Southern Pacific gave up nearly a point. Building shares were quiet and moved along with the balance of the list. Greyhound dropped a point, and Texas was soft in the oil division.

The brokerage fraternity breathed a sigh of relief on the announcement that directors of International Nickel had decided to allow the company's shares to remain on the big board.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bonds were irregular in a moderately active session today. Good reinvestment demand appeared in some of the best rated corporate obligations, and a sprinkling of fresh highs resulted, but United States Treasury securities drifted lower. Most speculative bonds were soft, owing to year-end tax selling and tax other influences that bore down on the speculative markets. In the foreign dollar section the main trend was downward. Turnover in all listed bonds was $10,940,000.

Treasury bonds showed only small changes in either direction, the variations ranging from gains to 5-32 point to losses of 7-32 point. The more indicative issues drifted lower, although most institutions now have adjusted their portfolios for year-end statements. Among best rated corporate securities a good reinvestment demand was apparent, with such issues as the telephone debentures and U. S. Steel debentures at the highs of the year and in some cases at fresh records. The best rails especially were in request.

Grain Brokers Are Accused By Wallace

Secretary Charges Cargill Firm With Manipulating Corn

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday charged Cargill, Inc., a large Minneapolis grain company, violated provisions of the commodity exchange act in connection with trading operations in corn futures contracts in 1937.

The charge specifically accused the grain company with having "manipulated" the prices of September and December, 1937, corn futures in the Chicago Board of Trade Market. A similar charge was made by Wallace against Cargill Grain Co. of Illinois, a subsidiary company and four officers of the two companies—J. H. McMillan, jr., E. J. Grimes, Julius Hendel and Philip C. Sayles.

The commission now is conducting a hearing on a complaint filed by Cargill, Inc., against the Chicago Board of Trade accusing it of manipulating prices in connection with the same futures.

The Secretary's action was another incident in a long drawn out conflict between the grain company and the Chicago market. The Chicago Board of Trade ousted the Cargill Co. from the market about a year ago on charges that it had manipulated prices. Cargill then followed with its complaint before the Commodity Exchange Commission, which is composed of the attorney general and the secretaries of agriculture and commerce.

The Wallace complaint also asserted the grain company and its officers engaged in "fictitious or 'wash' sales of corn futures on the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce toward the end of March, 1938," and "thereby creating a false impression of activity and encouraging public participation in that market."

Board of Trade "Gratified"

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP).—Kenneth S. Templeton, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said today the board was "gratified" that the Secretary of Agriculture had taken action against Cargill, Inc., "after a full and complete investigation."

In a statement issued at his office, President Templeton said: "The complaint today filed by the Secretary of Agriculture against Cargill, Inc., and its representative states that the Secretary 'has reason to believe' that the Cargill interests violated the commodity exchange act in attempting to manipulate prices and corner the September, 1937, corn future.

"For these same reasons, the Board of Trade closed trading in September, 1937, corn futures and expelled the Cargill interests from membership."

Cotton Futures Work Lower With Liquidation

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 27.—Cotton eased today under near month liquidation and moderate hedge selling. March sold off from 8.36 to 8.33 and closed at the low, with final quotations 3 to 7 points net lower.

The market opened 2 to 5 points lower owing to issuance of notices against 9,300 bales in settlement of January contracts on first notice day for that delivery. Foreign orders were limited. Distant positions felt the pressure of a little Southern hedge selling. January recovered around noon when it was reported that trade interests had taken in the notices, but the market turned easier toward the close under renewed liquidation.

Steel Operations Decline to 38.8%

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 12.9 points to 38.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 51.7 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

The drop in the operating rate was credited in steel circles largely to the usual year-end lag in buying to reduce inventories and to the dual holiday curtailment. A month ago operations were 60.7 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 19.2 per cent.

Baltimore & Ohio Net Gains in November

Baltimore, Dec. 27.—Net railway operating income of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for November was $1,674,985, an increase of $776,658 over November last year. Expenses for the month were $9,222,052, or $451,678 less than in November, 1937.

For the 11 months of this year net railway operating income was $13,112,123, a decrease of $11,094,526, compared with the same period of last year.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 27.—Price changes were mixed in the bourse today and trading was small. Government bonds and banking issues closed heavy. Bank of France declined 270 francs and French rentes were off 10 to 140 centimes. Suez Canal and Royal Dutch finished a little lower. London and Liverpool markets were closed.

Home Building Here Swings Sharply Higher

Contracts Exceeding 73 Million Is Total For Eleven Months

The construction industry of the Washington metropolitan area went into the last lap of this year with a contract accumulation of more than $73,000,000. H. A. Johns, Washington manager of the Dodge reports division of F. W. Dodge Corporation, released his monthly summary of local construction activities yesterday with comments on the highlights.

"Residential building in the Washington area is lagging behind the 11 months' contract volume in 1937. The activities in recent months have been swinging upward, sharply, with no indication of slackening. Nonresidential work is behind the corresponding volume of last year, with recent strong months. Heavy engineering construction by the Governmental agencies and the utilities is more active than it was in the 11 month's period of 1937.

"It is highly significant," he added, "that privately financed construction in the Washington metropolitan area has established a favorable margin of $31,000,000 over the publicly financed work."

A grouping of all types of construction in the Washington metropolitan area, consisting of the District, Arlington and Fairfax counties, Va.; Montgomery and Prince Georges counties, Md., reveals an 11-month total of $73,003,000.

112% Gain in November

All the contracts awarded in November reached $10,461,000 in a 112 per cent gain over the $4,903,000 in November, 1937.

Residential building contracts moved to the level of $42,131,000 during the January-through-November period. The volume in those months of last year was $49,988,000.

November residential contracts, here, had a valuation of $6,422,000 including a gain of 135 per cent beyond $2,730,000, the record for the month in 1937.

The non-residential contracts recorded in November by the Dodge news staff amounted to $2,750,000. There was a gain of 48 per cent over the corresponding 1937 total, $1,861,000. Heavy engineering projects accounted for contracts totaling $1,289,000 in November, 1938, and $338,000 in November, 1937.

Business Failures

New York, Dec. 27 (AP).—Business failures in the United States in the week ended December 22 totaled 229, compared with 216 in the preceding week and 231 in the comparable 1937 week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

C. S. Garland Joins Alex Brown & Sons

Announcement was made simultaneously in Baltimore and New York yesterday that Charles Stedman Garland, of Chicago, is resigning as vice president and director of Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc., of New York, to become a general partner in the firm of Alex. Brown & Sons, Baltimore.

Mr. Garland is one of the best known of the younger investment bankers of the country. He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1898. He graduated from Yale University in the class of 1920. After having engaged in business for several years in Pittsburgh, he became associated with Brown Bros. & Co. in New York in May, 1928. In the following year he opened an office for that firm in Chicago. On January 1, 1933, he was admitted as a general partner of Brown, Harriman & Co., Inc.

Firm 138 Years Old

Changes in the membership of Alex. Brown & Sons has been infrequent since its foundation in 1800 by Alexander Brown, the great-great-great grandfather of two of the present partners. Headquarters of the firm at that time were in Baltimore, but offices were established by the son of Alexander Brown in New York, Philadelphia and Liverpool; later in London.

The New York and Philadelphia houses later became the firm of Brown Bros. & Co., of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, and the London office became Brown, Shipley & Co.

For many years past there has been friendly co-operation between these firms and Alex. Brown & Sons, but with no financial identification for the past 100 years.

The present general partners of Alex. Brown & Sons are B. Howell Griswold, jr., son-in-law of Gen. Alexander Brown; Thomas Hildt, formerly president of the Merchants Bank; Alexander Brown Griswold and Benjamin H. Griswold 3d, representing the sixth generation of Browns since foundation of the firm. Walter N. Stromenger and Harry F. Swope are associate partners of the firm.

Hancock Appointment

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League went on record yesterday as being highly satisfied over the appointment of Frank W. Hancock, of North Carolina to the board of directors of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. A former Representative, he is well known to loan league leaders here as well as nationally.

Business Meetings

Agency members of the Equitable Life Assurance Society are holding a four-day meeting at the Hay-Adams House, ending Friday. The American Businessmen's Association is meeting at the same hotel today.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

D. M., a contributor, submits a hand upon which a careless player leading out of turn cost his side a grand slam. D. M. writes:

"I think the opening lead is one of the most important phases of the game of bridge. At the Unity Bridge Club, where I play, and elsewhere, there are opening leaders who have not the slightest idea of what constitutes a good lead. They seldom ask for a review of the bidding. They select one card, put it back, select another and finally decide upon a third suit. These fellows are always crabbing about their losses and the tough breaks they receive.

"Witness what happened because of the opening lead on this hand:

North.	South.
♠ A K 8 5	♠ J 10 9
♡ 4 2	♡ A K 7
◇ K Q 9 6	◇ A 10 3
♣ 7 5	♣ A K J

"The bidding:

North	East	South	West
(1) ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

"West, who was studying his hand while the bidding went on, fussed around with a card or two and then led the deuce of spades. No time was wasted. 'Do you know your rights, partner? I inquired, calling the lead out of turn. 'Sure,' he replied, and then to East he said, 'Lead a spade. East, who held three spades including the queen, which but for his partner's thoughtlessness would have been a sure trick, was forced to lead from it, and you can imagine what he said when he saw the dummy!"

Another grand slam was won through the opening lead on today's hand played at the Union League Club and contributed by H. C. M. But this time the defender cannot be charged with carelessness. His opening which proved so disastrous for his side was simply unfortunate rather than unwise—there was absolutely no way for him to know what suit to lead. Yet the hand emphasizes how careful players must be in making their selection.

After the unfortunate opening an automatic squeeze was developed against the leader's partner and he was forced to discard an ace. Here is the way H. C. M. describes it:

"My partner, who is inexperienced but a fairly sound bidder, dealt and opened with no trump. As we play a strong no trump, I decided not hesitate (forcing bids might confuse my partner' and bid seven no trump immediately. West doubled and East opened a spade instead of a heart to his partner's ace.

"Two spade tricks and seven clubs put a beautiful squeeze on West. He could not hold the fourth diamond and the ace of hearts. Receiving a low discard in diamonds and a high discard in hearts from East, he decided to throw away the ace of hearts. Declarer thew off his fourth diamond on the last club lead and took the king of hearts for the thirteenth trick. Actually it made no difference, for had West discarded a diamond, declarer would have won all four diamonds."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

By Scott Hart.

ONE of Washington's best known Federal employes, Mrs. Helen McCarty Voss, of the Navy Department, has been nominated for the title of "Miss Civil Service."

MRS. VOSS

Mrs. Voss served as a yeomanette during the World War and at present is employed in statistical work in the Medical Bureau. She is a charter member of the American Federation of Government Employes and has attended most of its national conventions.

And now the homestretch of the campaign to find the ideal feminine civil service employe is entered; the lists are closed on Saturday and the judges will then begin their investigation of the candidates. Their choice will be announced the night of January 16 and the winner gets The Washington Post Cup. Send in your nominations on or before Saturday.

INSIDERS at the Federal Communications Commission don't think that Congress will be minded to plunge into any immediate investigation of the FCC rumpuses. They think that Congress will give the commission time to straighten out its household controversies on its own footing. What this belief is based on isn't clear; but it was said that the FCA tempests have been greatly exaggerated. Some rumors held that shake-ups involved or would involve 200 people, when only seven to date have been involved. "The troubles have been more advertised than actual," said the spokesman emphatically.

A MISSOURIAN scores: K. A. Brasfield, formerly assistant comptroller in charge of the field accounting section, division of finance and accounts, FCA has been promoted to comptroller of the FCA, upon reassignment of C. D. Simpson, acting comptroller, who returns to Baltimore as comptroller. M. E. Menk, former chief field accounter, has been made assistant comptroller in charge of the field accounting section, division of finance and accounts.

BRASFIELD

Brasfield was born in Garden City, Mo.; attended the University of Kansas and Washington University in St. Louis. He came here from the FCA in St. Louis is a certified public accountant, is married and lives in Arlington, Va. His friends mention his fine golf game.

A STUDY of conditions surrounding American Indians has been made by friendly organizations and individuals, revolves around the sometimes controversial Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, and finally comes to light in a [illegible] that is hailed by the Office of Indian Affairs even though the findings were not in every instance favorable to the office, the sponsors of the report (and the names are impressive). Some human stuff is embraced, including: "One legitimate cause for complaint in some areas is the domination of the full-bloods by the more numerous half-bloods. Another difficulty on two or three reservations has been dissatisfaction with the elected tribal officers who, in their inexperience, have shown themselves to be arrogant in small matters with their own people, unmindful of minority rights or largely concerned with staying in office."

Certainly the white politicians are offering no good example in the latter instance of complaint.

And again: "Indians have few places and little preference in the Indian Service, except in the most menial positions. Indian employment (of late, this is meant) in regular and emergency services greatly increased; for example, Indians in Washington office increased from 11 in 1933 to 83 in 1937. On April 1, 1938, a total of 3,916 Indians were employed in the Service, of whom 3,627 were regular employes and 289 emergency workers, employed for six months or more."

COMPLAINTS comes that the down-but-not-out Section 213 still operates in certain emergency agencies . . . The chiefs are groaning in Interior and Agriculture (undoubtedly elsewhere) about that Christmas and New Year holiday set-up wherein the employes could draw four days from annual leave and get ten days off in return. And did the boys and girls take advantage of it! . . . Aubrey Williams is dusting off the files cabinets to move from 1734 New York avenue to the Washington Building, Fifteenth and New York avenue. He isn't taking anyone with him except a couple of trusty secretaries.

Bob Burns Says—

Say, I jes learned somethin' that makes me feel smaller than an amoeba's eyewinker. The League of Nations has gotten tired tryin' to prevent wars and has been occupyin' its spare time countin' up the number of boys and girls that are spinnin' around on this dizzy planet. How many of us do you guess there are?

Only two billion, one hundred and thirty-four million—and in the minute it took me to write this, you can add at least fifty more! Talk about countin' noses! If all these noses took a notion to sneeze at once, they would generate enough power to blow the man out of the moon and dunk him in the Milky Way!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Warning

Sammy Jay is mischievous. There is no question about that. Sammy was born that way. I know that some people don't like Sammy, all on account of his propensity to get into mischief. Farmer Brown's boy is not one of these. He and Sammy are friends despite the fact that Sammy delights in interfering and telling all within hearing just where Farmer Brown's boy is when the latter is trying to keep his presence unknown.

"Sammy makes up for it in other ways," says Farmer Brown's boy. "He has upset my plans many times, but also he has many times led me to interesting sights that I could have missed but for him."

I suspect that many of Sammy's neighbors in fur and feathers hold much the same feeling in regard to him. He has made trouble for a lot of them, but also he has saved many of them by giving timely warnings. You see this mischief-maker is not really bad at heart. He loves to get people into trouble, but he also is ever ready to give warnings when he discovers them in danger.

Sammy was not over in the Green Forest this morning. He was spying. Yes, sir, that is what he was doing. Sammy Jay does a lot of spying. That is one reason he is disliked.

Sammy had seen Tommy, Sue, and Sammy start for the Green Forest and had followed. He wanted to see what they would do. He was curious. He had had his breakfast and he had nothing in particular to do, so he silently followed, flitting from tree to tree far enough behind not to attract attention but near enough to see all that went on.

Of course Sammy saw the footprints of Reddy Fox in the snow. He recognized them at once. He had seen them too often to be in any doubt. He knew what they meant. "So Reddy hunted over here last night," thought Sammy. "I wonder what luck he had. I wonder if he caught anyone I know, anyone who will be really missed."

The more he wondered, the more he wanted to find out. Following these two-legged folk was slow, and so far there had been nothing exciting. He would go ahead and have a look around. He could always return to watch these intruders. So he flew ahead. By and by he saw a lot of feathers on the snow. He sat on a branch just above them. He saw Reddy's tracks in the snow all about.

"It was one of those young Grouse who have been living around here since last fall," thought Sammy. "Too bad. Too bad. Reddy was lucky for once. I wonder where he took that bird to eat it."

Just then Sammy saw a great gray bird fly off among the trees. Sammy froze. He held his breath. He wished he was safely hidden instead of right out in plain sight. That was Terror the Goshawk, the winged killer from the North who comes down to the Green Forest only in winter. Sure at last that Terror was no longer in the neighborhood, Sammy dared to move again. Perhaps Reddy hadn't been so lucky after all. Terror the Goshawk might well be called Terror the Grouse Hawk for a Grouse is his favorite food.

Sammy went on. A little distance beyond his sharp eyes spied a spot of red at the foot of a big tree. He flew over to that tree and looked down. His eyes snapped with delight. He was looking down on Reddy Fox curled up asleep, his bushy tail over his nose, but his two black ears on guard even though he slept. Sammy sat there for some time. He heard faint voices in the distance. Tommy, Sue and Sammy were approaching. Sammy flew to meet them. "Thief! Thief! Thief!" he screamed.

"Instantly Reddy Fox was on his feet. He listened a moment, grinned, and slipped away. It wasn't the first time he had had and heeded a warning from Sammy Jay.

Error States Elliott Stand As Sasscer's

Anti-New Deal Words Attributed to Him By Printer's Mistake

Through misplacement of a key paragraph by composing room make-up men, Monday's late edition of The Post incorrectly attributed anti-New Deal statements to Lansdale G. Sasscer, prominent Maryland Democrat and candidate for the Congressional seat of the late Representative Stephen W. Gambrill.

The utterances were actually made by David L. Elliott, Baltimore attorney, seeking Republican nomination for the vacant House post.

Sasscer, retiring president of the Maryland State Senate and a close friend of the late Congressman, declared:

"After careful reflection I have decided to accept the Democratic nomination for Congress should I be designated as the nominee by the Democratic State Central Committee.

"I am grateful for the widespread offers of support which I have received from friends throughout the Fifth Congressional District, which has suffered a distinct loss in the passing of Mr. Gambrill.

"The interest of my friends has materially influenced my course. If nominated I shall make an aggressive campaign and if elected I shall exert my best efforts to foster and forward the interests of my constituents."

Elliott, opposed to the New Deal, said that he intended to renew his fight against the New Deal and "to my utmost ability prevent the greatest and most powerful bureaucracy of modern times from continuing its plan for perpetuation." It was this paragraph which wrongly appeared as if coming from Sasscer.

Fairfax Imposes 72-Hour Wait on Visitors Who Wed

Cupid's curb service was moved farther southward last night when Fairfax County Clerk John M. Whalen invoked the 72-hour wait on marriage license applications of non-residents, effective today.

The three-day wait period already had been in effect in Arlington County and Alexandria City, when clerks there were swamped following closing of the marriage mart at Elkton, Md.

Whalen held off imposition of the ruling of Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown until after the Christmas holiday, but he said the continuing rush yesterday proved too much for his office force, in addition to their regular duties.

Twenty-three couples applied for licenses yesterday, but only 13 were granted.

Rotary to Dine Today at Proposed Site of Boys Club

For lunch today the Washington Rotary Club will go to Peck Memorial Chapel, Twenty-seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where next week the Georgetown Boys Club will be housed—thanks to rotary members.

The building, formerly owned by the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, has been purchased by the Rotary Club and is being equipped to provide recreational facilities and club opportunities for boys of the Georgetown and old First Ward areas.

The present boys club, which was started by Rotary members in 1931, is housed on the two floors above a grocery store at Thirty-first and M streets northwest.

From slightly more than 50 boys in 1931, the club's membership has grown to 660 members.

Acquisition of the new quarters—which cost the Rotarians $35,000 for the building alone—answers a longfelt need and is the answer to the hopes of numerous civic and welfare agencies.

Mrs. Nora Byrnes To Be Buried Today

Requiem mass for Mrs. Nora B. Byrnes, who died Monday at her home, 652 Franklin street northeast, will be said today at 10 a. m., in St. Dominic's Church, Sixth and F streets southwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Byrnes, who was 57, had been a resident of the District for 48 years. She entered Government service in 1906 and since 1908 had been connected with the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, Department of Agriculture. She was a member of the Third Order of St. Dominic. Surviving are her husband, James M. Byrnes, and a sister, Mrs. Catherine Miller.

James E. Simmons Seeks to Change Name

James Elma Simmons, 24, of 212 Webster street northwest, filed a petition in District Court yesterday for permission to change his name to James Elma Fitzsimmons.

Simmons, a Treasury Department employe, said he has been known as Fitzsimmons since boyhood.

Hopkins Proposes Business Find Jobs for the Idle

By the Associated Press.

Members of Congress, who soon must tackle the relief problem again, heard with interest yesterday that Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins was considering a national campaign to find jobs in private industry for the unemployed.

It was learned that Hopkins has sounded out several leaders of the business world about a drive to create a "re-employment psychology."

Well-informed persons said that study of the possibility had progressed to the point where a fairly definite program has been outlined—one that could be undertaken within a few weeks so as to take advantage of the expected seasonal upturn in business next spring.

Hopkins, it was said, intends to rely greatly upon the Commerce Department's business advisory council and other organizations of businessmen to carry it out.

He already has asked the council, which was organized by his predecessor, Daniel C. Roper, to continue.

Comment from legislators yesterday indicated that relief methods will be one of the foremost issues of the new Congress.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, said he believed local communities must bear a portion of relief costs.

Scout Jamboree Reunion Tonight

More than 100 Washington "veterans" of the 1937 Boy Scout Jamboree will hold their second annual reunion tonight in Northminster Presbyterian Church, Georgia and Alaska avenues northwest.

Victor Oringer, son of the director of the Bureau of Fisheries aquarium, will be toastmaster. Linn C. Drake, Scout executive for the District, and numerous other Scouting official will attend.
